Bunn Drive Proposal Held Up As Planners Weigh Need vs. Impact

Bill Enslin, a member of both the Princeton Township Committee and the Regional Planning Board of Princeton, offered a terse assessment Monday as to the need for additional senior housing in the community: "There are no units of market-rate senior housing in Princeton."

Mr. Enslin and Township Mayor Phyllis Marchand, who have both long advocated the creation of additional age-restricted housing, and who both sit on the Regional Planning Board of Princeton, can be expected to vote this Thursday night in favor of a plan to build 140 market-rate, 62-and-over age-restricted units on the western side of Bunn Drive, just south of Hilltop Park, and southwest of the Princeton Community Village (PCV).

The 20.9-acre site, in the Township's Office Research Zone, was established as a senior community district overlay zone in December 2001 through the support of Township Committee.

But since that time, several municipal boards and commissions have questioned the idea of building on that site, which, as part of the environmentally-sensitive Princeton Ridge, consists of rocky soils, bedrock, and steep hills.

Also of concern to environmentalists is the Transco pipeline that, according to the proposal, would be straddled by the five three-story garden apartments designed by K. Hovnanian.

The project has been taken to task by the Princeton Environmental Commission and the Planning Board's own advisory board for these reasons, but with seniors moving out of town, several elected officials have identified increased senior housing as a major goal.

"We have, in both communities, lots of senior moderate- and low-income housing, but we have no housing for people who want to sell their large home and move," said Ms. Marchand last Thursday at the Planning Board's preliminary hearing for the proposal. That session, which was attended by residents both for and against the plan, was cut short due to the late hour and will continue tomorrow evening. Ms. Marchand regretted the fact that Princeton has lost aging residents to neighboring communities:

Township Gets Housing Quota

Princeton Township was given the opportunity to absorb its share of state-mandated affordable housing Monday night. But unlike Princeton Borough, which is faced with fulfilling its requirements in a municipality with little developable land, the Township appears to have more options.

The Township is required to provide 116 affordable units from 2004 through 2014, a calculation based on the state's Council on Affordable Housing (COAH) formula relating to job growth and square-footage for new development. COAH subsequently works off a square-footage formula that estimates how many jobs would be created.

Citing construction information discrepancies between the Township and the state's Department of Community Affairs, Township Housing Consultant Elizabeth McKenzie labeled the COAH requirement a "work in progress": "We're sort of tweaking the numbers."

COAH uses construction data as supplied by the state. If those data differ from an individual municipality's, the town must offer reasons for those discrepancies.

Ms. McKenzie said "a lot" of the requirement was based on certificates of occupancy issued during 2004 and 2005 and will be based on building approvals already given. Unlike the Borough, however, the Township does not have a mechanism to capture affordable housing opportunities through a growth share ordinance. The Borough implements an overlay zone that requires any residential development consisting of five or more units to set aside 20 percent for affordable housing or funding for affordable housing activities.

Ms. Mckenzie also worried that when dealing with the private and public schools, in light of several school improvements and expansions, there was no mechanism in place that would encourage those institutions to contribute to affordable housing in a way that is commensurate with the spaces they occupy. "That's going to be somewhat problematic as we go down the road," she said, adding that similar problems arise when dealing with Princeton University development in the Township.

She recommended that the Township view the 116-unit obligation in "various components," including the University's construction prospects and the consideration of a growth share ordinance that mirrors the Borough's.

Increased Development Along Ridge Could Increase Flooding, Residents Say

The Princeton Environmental Commission has begun discussions that could result in a change in zoning standards along the portion of Princeton Township known as the Princeton Ridge.

The Ridge runs roughly along the northern portion of the Township between Route 206 and Province Line Road.

A handful of residents living along the Ridge came out in support of such changes at a hearing last Wednesday, in hopes that a revision in zoning might reduce the impact of overdeveloping what has been deemed an "environmentally-sensitive" part of the Township.

The discussions stem from the prospect of increased development in the area. Residents have worried that more building, along with pervious surfaces, could lead to flooding and exacerbate potential sinkholes, which some residents said are caused by a flow of underground water.

A subdivision proposal on a double lot at 50 Woodland Drive was the latest example of the residents' concerns.

"I felt that it was wooded area that was built into the area as green area," said Jeanne Fountain, a resident of Woodland. "In a way, I think we have an ideal cluster neighborhood in the way

Institute for Advanced Study Receives $25 Million Donation

The Institute for Advanced Study announced Sunday that it has received $25 million from the Charles Simonyi Fund for Arts and Sciences. The unrestricted cash gift is the largest donation since the founding of the Institute, and will be named The Karoly Simonyi Memorial Endowment Fund, honoring Charles Simonyi's late father.

Charles Simonyi, a Trustee of the institute since 1997 and President of the Corporation since 2003, established the Charles Simonyi Fund for Arts and Sciences in 2003. Dr. Simonyi is President and Chief Executive Officer of the intentional Software Corporation in Bellevue, Washington, a company he founded in 2002. In addition to the Institute, the Charles Simonyi Fund for Arts and Sciences has donated to the Seattle Symphony, the Seattle Public Library, Seattle's Museum of Flight, Russian National Orchestra and the Metropolitan Opera Broadcast.

Peter Goddard, Director of the Institute, said he is "immensely grateful" to the Charles Simonyi Fund for Arts and Sciences for the gift, adding that the donation "will play an essential part in ensuring that the Institute is able to remain committed to its mission of advancing research in the most fundamental aspects of the sciences and humanities."

The Simonyi gift brings the total gifts and pledges to the Institute this year to more than $50 million. That figure includes additional gifts received from supporters of the Institute, and it represents half of an initial goal of $100 million established by the Institute to strengthen its endowment and to fund existing programs.

Dr. Simonyi has been actively involved with the Institute since 1996. He endowed the Charles Simonyi Professorship in Theoretical Physics, currently held by physicist Edward Witten of the Institute's School of Natural Sciences. Dr. Simonyi also donated $5 million to the Institute's School of Mathematics to assist recruiting members, often from abroad. Simonyi Hall, the building that houses the School of Mathematics, was dedicated in May 2000 in recognition of Dr. Simonyi's participation in Institute community. Since 2001, he has served as Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee.

A Community Bulletin

Members of the community have been invited to speak with Princeton Borough officials at the first working meeting to discuss the Pine Street Park, tomorrow evening, September 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the downstairs meeting room at Borough Hall. A campaign to rename the part in memory of the late David Bradford, a professor of economics and public affairs at the Woodrow Wilson School, is currently underway. The 66-year-old professor, who lived on Pine Street, died after suffering extensive burns in a February house fire.

A proposal to build a three-story, 30,588-square-foot office building on Bunn Drive in Princeton Township was granted a recommendation for approval by the Site Plan Review Advisory Board (SPRAB). The application is slated for a final hearing before the Regional Planning Board of Princeton in October. SPRAB recommended that the applicant, Gordon Bunn Drive MAB Associates, LLC, replant more trees than the proposed 196, as 349 trees are to be removed for the building. The board also requested that the maintenance of trees planted off-site be the responsibility of the applicant.

In addition to completing a hearing for a senior housing proposal on Bunn Drive (see story on page 1), the Regional Planning Board of Princeton will consider a plan to expand developing rights on a Princeton Borough zoning district that comprises Princeton University's Engineering Quadrangle. The University is requesting 100,000 square-feet of additional building allowances, while increasing the "no-build" buffer that abuts Murray Place to 150 feet. Residents along Murray Place and adjacent neighborhoods are concerned that an increase in development will increase noise and traffic in the area.

On Tuesday night, September 27, the Princeton Regional Board of Education was scheduled to discuss the superintendent's report on district goals for the school year, as well as the approval of job descriptions for an early childhood coordinator and a middle school athletic on-site coordinator. The Board was also slated to approve an application allowing $314,692 in funds for the district under the No Child Left Behind Act.

UNDERSTANDING THE ISSUE: Estuardo Arriola, an immigrant who lives in Princeton, spoke out about his own views on illegal immigration at a forum held at the Princeton Public Library on Tuesday, September 20. The forum, which was co-sponsored by the Latin American Legal Defense and Education Fund, focused on the ramifications of 9/11 on the immigrant population in the U.S. (Photo by Candace Braun)

Local Experts, Immigrants Discuss Ramifications of 9/11

TOPICS
Of the Town

Illegal immigration, and how the government's approach to it has changed since 9/11, were discussed by local panelists, some of whom are immigrants themselves, in a forum held at the Princeton Public Library on September 20.

The talk was the third in a series co-sponsored by the library and the Latin American Legal Defense and Education Fund (LALDEF).

"The issue of illegal immigration appears as something that affects only the Latino community, but it's an American problem," said Maria Juega, chair of LALDEF. "We cannot separate illegal immigrants from the rest of the nation. They are, in fact, part of us."

Among the panelists to speak was Estuardo Arriola, a trustee with LALDEF, and an immigrant living in the Princeton community.

Mr. Arriola, who crossed the border through Mexico on his fourth try in 1987, became a U.S. citizen in 1995. He shared his own story with the library audience, telling how he's spent all his time since coming to the U.S. working and trying to get his children a good education.

While he was able to find a job within four months of his arrival, today many of his fellow immigrants living in the U.S. have been less fortunate, he said.

"We just need the opportunity to legalize our status, to prove we can work hard and integrate into society. I can prove that to my community, because I did it," he said, adding that he recently started his own business.

Mr. Arriola voiced concern for the increase in arrests and deportations, which are leaving many families without a father, and thus, without an income. While these families are encouraged to seek help from social services, according to Mr. Arriola: "We don't need anything for free. We want to work for it."

The Rev. Muriel Burrows of the Witherspoon Presbyterian Church spoke about her own experiences emigrating to the U.S. from South Africa during apartheid.

She discussed her difficulties in becoming a U.S. citizen, and how she believes that the Patriot Act has only made the process more difficult by giving the government permission to detain anyone believed to be suspected of terrorism.

"If they don't like your point of view ... the attorney general can arrest you, without probable cause," said Douglas S. Massey, a professor of sociology and public affairs at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School and an advocate for immigrants' rights.

In order to stop illegal immigration, the U.S. banned companies from hiring undocumented immigrants in the 1980s, but this method of keeping them out has failed, as many companies use a system of indirect hiring, said Mr. Massey: "They take ads out in Mexican papers asking workers to come work for them."

The U.S. treats the Mexican border very differently than the Canadian border, even though a large Islamic population lives in Montreal and Toronto, he added: "There are only a few hundred border patrol officers on the border of Canada, and a few thousand on the border of Mexico."

Marlene Lao-Collins, associate director of social concerns for the New Jersey Catholic Conference, said she believes that today's national policies do nothing but keep families apart and make it harder for those who live here.

"After 9/11 the immigrants ... all wore the scarlet letter. And it wasn't an A, it was a T," she said, referring to the "t" in terrorist. "We have a moral obligation to take care of these migrants ... and to welcome them with open arms."

The Rev. Burrows concluded her speech by reading a list of the 14 ways to identify fascism because she believes the U.S. government has been moving closer and closer to it since 9/11.

"I'm beginning to believe I'm back in apartheid South Africa," she said.

Library Looks For Solutions To 2006 Budget Squeeze

Cutting back on hours, increasing non-resident membership fees, and offering a passport service are just three remedies the Princeton Public Library's Board of Trustees is considering to offset the impact of its 2006 budget proposal to the Borough and Township.

The library is being asked not to significantly increase its 2006 budget from the previous year, and members of the library's Board were brainstorming budget strategies at their meeting on Tuesday, September 20. A 2006 budget request is due to both municipalities in October.

Last year, according to Director Leslie Burger, the library was asked to submit a budget that did not increase at all from 2004.

"This was a challenging task considering that 2005 was the first full year in the new library," she said, adding that the library was able to accomplish this through a number of one-time opportunities, including allocating unused Borough and Township funds for 2004, a total of $79,000, to the operating budget.

Some of the budgetary concerns that are facing the library this year include a relatively insignificant increase in contributions from the Friends of the Library, and the failure of non-tax revenues to sufficiently plug the gap between Borough and Township funding and the library's operating needs.

"Your terrific success is a double-edged sword," said Borough Mayor Joe O'Neill, noting that the increase in membership and programs at the library has caused an additional need in staffing and resources.

According to a financial report released by the library in July, there has been a 22 percent increase in the number of cardholders since last spring, and the total circulation of library items has increased almost 45 percent since last year.

One possible means of increasing revenue would be to offer a passport service to residents on nights and weekends. While the measure has been contested by the Borough in the past, Ms. Burger noted that the library would only offer the service when both Borough Hall and the post office are closed.

The service would bring in $30 per passport, with little cost to the library. The Borough currently brings in approximately $40,000 per year in revenue from the service, according to Mr. O'Neill.

Other possible sources of revenue that the library will consider are asking the Friends of the Library to increase their contribution approximately 10 percent, and increasing the membership fees for non-residents. Current fees for non-residents under the age of 65 are $30 for one month, $90 for six months, or $150 for a year.

"I know people who still think [the current fee] is a bargain," said Township Mayor Phyllis Marchand, adding that the library could also consider raising the rental fee for use of the community room (currently $50 for four hours), as well as cutting back on the number of hours the library is open.

However, in regard to decreasing library hours, Ms. Marchand said: "We're not there yet."

Although it would slow down getting books back on shelves, reducing employee hours is also a possibility, said Ms. Burger.

The library director added that the library currently spends $15,000 annually for trash pick up and snow removal, and said she will ask the Borough if it would consider sharing the service it uses.

"I'd be willing to put trash barrels out on the street if it would help," said Ms. Burger.

The board of trustees will review a formal budget proposal for 2006 at a special budget meeting, slated for October 4.

Library To Host Talk On Learning Differences

Dr. Gordon F. Sherman, executive director of the Newgrange School and Education Center, will discuss the implications of neuroscience research for teaching and learning in a program at the Princeton Public Library on Thursday, September 29, at 7:30 p.m.

Designed for parents and educators, Dr. Sherman's talk, "Cerebrodiversity in the Classroom: Lessons from Neuroscience," will explore brain differences in children with learning disabilities.

Dr. Sherman, a noted neuroscientist and former assistant professor of neurology at Harvard Medical School, will discuss why these brain differences occur and explain how they can both benefit children and provide obstacles to be overcome. Particular emphasis will be placed on dyslexia and other diverse learning styles.

Dr. Sherman conducted research related to brain development and understanding of developmental dyslexia for more than 25 years. He is the former director of the Dyslexia Research Laboratory at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston.

He is the author of more than 80 scientific articles, reviews, and books, and is the former president of the International Dyslexia Association.

PROFILES in EDUCATION

Catherine Marchetta

1-26796

Name: Catherine Marchetta
School: Princeton High School
Year: Senior
Activities: Field hockey; singing in "Around 8," an a cappella group; member of Teen Advisory Group of Corner House; music conductor at St. Paul's Church; and volunteer with the Chrohn's and Colitis Foundation of America
Most Memorable Book: My Antonia, by Willa Cather
Person You Admire: "My mom [Maureen Marchetta]; we have six kids in our family and she's been such a great role model for all of us. She's such a warm and loving person....I want to be just like her."

Catherine Marchetta, 17, is a senior at Princeton High School who is active in both her school and in her community. However, there is one thing about this student that makes all of her accomplishments, both large and small, seem exemplary: she wakes up each day battling a chronic illness known as ulcerative colitis, an inflammatory bowel disease (IBD).

The illness, which has no known cause or cure, allows Catherine to accomplish more than the average student on some days, while on others, she is too fatigued to even do her homework.

First becoming ill at the age of 13, Catherine went through a difficult year, experiencing severe abdominal pain that her family at first believed was caused by lactose intolerance. By the end of seventh grade, she had become extremely weak and anemic.

"It just continued to get worse," she said, noting that her pediatrician at first mistakenly diagnosed her with food poisoning, and put her on a banana and rice diet.

That summer, while visiting her aunt, a pediatrician, she finally got the help she needed.

"I had lost 20 pounds. It was really a dramatic difference," she said of her appearance, which caused her aunt to have her immediately taken to the hospital, where she was put on an IV for two weeks.

"It was really hard for me emotionally. I didn't really know what to do," said Catherine, remembering her feelings when she was first diagnosed.

"I remember thinking, 'How can I face the kids at school?' I didn't think I was normal anymore," she said, recalling how hard it was to walk the hallways in junior high, particularly on days when her face was bloated from one of the medications she was taking.

After the school nurse suggested she get in touch with the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of America (CCFA), Catherine attended CCFA's IBD Education Day in Philadelphia, where doctors talked about new research that is being conducted on the illness, and a panel discussion was led by patients who helped answer others' questions and concerns. It was her first opportunity to meet other people who were going through the same thing.

"I realized it's not the end of your life, it's just a new part," she said, adding that she found the panel discussions so helpful, she is now a panelist herself every year.

The following summer she attended her first camp ever, Camp Oasis, for youth with Chrohn's and Colitis, where she made many friends she keeps regularly in touch with.

"They really embraced me and took me in....I had so much fun," she recalled, adding that last year she served as the youth ambassador for the Philadelphia/Delaware Valley Chapter of CCFA. The one-year position allowed her to speak to others about her illness, as well as address CCFA's annual gala and IBD Education Day.

Fighting the Illness

Now, taking a daily dose of 17 pills to stay healthy, Catherine still has good days and bad days. Although she often wakes up in the morning fatigued and with abdominal pain, she is able to fight the illness by drinking plenty of water and staying on a strict diet. She also visits the doctor every two months to receive a five-hour infusion of a drug called Remicade.

As captain of the PHS field hockey team, she felt especially frustrated by her limitations recently when she developed foot sores and arthritis, which caused her to miss one of the first practices of the season.

"I loved sports before I was diagnosed and I still love sports," she said, noting that she will be participating in the CCFA Philadelphia 5K Run/Walk on October 1, which helps raise awareness and funds for the life-saving work of CCFA. This will be Catherine's fourth year running in the race. The first two years she won the gold medal, and last year she won the silver. In 2004 she was able to raise $8,000, and this year she is looking toward a goal of $10,000.

Catherine and her mother also recently helped further CCFA's cause by urging New Jersey State representatives to help pass a government act that will increase state funding to research toward a cure.

"I used to ask 'Why me?' but now I say 'Why not me?'" said Catherine, adding that she feels she has the ability to make a difference by helping others understand her illness. "I help put a face on the issue."

Every Day Obstacles

Growing up in a household with three sisters and two brothers, and two very supportive parents, Catherine said that while her family can't fully comprehend the obstacles she must overcome each day, the support she receives from them makes all the difference.

She added that her friends and teachers are also understanding of her limitations, particularly on days when she isn't well enough to complete her school work.

Looking to the future, Catherine has lined up several schools she would like to attend following graduation, including Wellesley College, Rutgers University, the University of Pennsylvania, Georgetown University, and Princeton University.

"I'm really not sure what I'll major in," she said, adding that she is most interested in pursuing a career in medicine. "Doctors and nurses are heroes in my mind. They help people live the lives they want to live."

Reflecting back on what she has learned since being diagnosed with her illness, Catherine said the most important thing in life is to be optimistic.

"I've learned to smile a lot, laugh a lot, and have a good time. We need to look at the good things we have....I don't take the simple things in life for granted."

To help support Catherine in the CCFA 5K Walk/Run, visit http://ccfa.kintera.org/faf/home/default.asp?ievent=111332, or send a check made out to "CCFA" to: Catherine Marchetta, 54 Crestview Drive, Princeton.

Color your home Williamsburg.

WILLIAMSBURG® PAINTS:
FRESH FROM THE 18TH CENTURY

Uncovering the inspiration. In the 1920s the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg began. Researchers examined buildings, objects and inventories of Williamsburg's colorful past. They discovered finishes and formulas for colors used on interior and exterior surfaces. In Williamsburg, vibrant colors and bold combinations weren't the exception but the norm. This information helped us create our new paint program.

By selecting WILLIAMSBURG® paints, you are choosing from an important palette of colors — 184 in all — that relate, coordinate and build on each other. Whether you start with a sumptuous wall color inspired by our garden greens or gravitate to a soft bedroom scheme in cream and gray, our paints will always deliver consistent quality and depth of color.

Presidential Debate Advisor To Speak at Wilson School

Robert B. Barnett, a general debate advisor in seven presidential campaigns, will present a lecture entitled "Presidential Debates: An Insider's View" at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, October 6, in Bowl 016, Robertson Hall, on the Princeton University campus.

Currently a senior partner at the Washington D.C.-based law firm of Williams & Connolly LLP, Mr. Barnett's advisory work focused on debate preparation. He helped Walter Mondale in 1976 and 1980 and co-headed the debate preparation team for Geraldine Ferraro in 1984, playing the role of Vice-President George H.W. Bush in practice debates with Congresswoman Ferraro. He reprised the role of George H.W. Bush in 1988 for Michael Dukakis and practice debated Bill Clinton more than 20 times in 1992. He also stood in for Dick Cheney in practice sessions for the Cheney/Lieberman debate in 2000 and headed Hilary Clinton's debate preparation team in 2000, playing the role of Congressman Rick Lazio. He took the Cheney role again in 2004 while preparing John Edwards for his debate.

As a practicing lawyer, Mr. Barnett has represented major U.S corporations, journalists, television news correspondents, and various public figures, as well as advising former government officials on their transition to the private sector, among them former President Bill Clinton, Madeleine Albright, Dan Quayle, and James Baker.

Mr. Barnett was ranked number one on Washingtonian Magazines's 2004 list of "Washington's Best Lawyers" and was named one of the 100 most powerful people in the entertainment industry by Entertainment Weekly.

The lecture, one in a series of events celebrating the Wilson School's 75th anniversary, is free and open to the public.

Staying on Course: Senior Center Event Helps Plan for the Future

A day-long seminar geared to help people plan for the future is scheduled for this coming weekend, and not a moment too soon, according to organizers:

"The government resources that our parents relied on look a little unreliable at this point, and the demographics don't look good," according to Susan Hoskins, executive director of the Princeton Senior Resource Center, which is hosting its second "Plan for the Future Day 2005" this Saturday. The event is geared to offer not only financial information, but tips on maintaining independence, and staying active.

Ms. Hoskins offered a rough estimate of the efficacy of the federal social security program, saying that the amount of guidance is diminishing as the baby boomer population begins to enter the retirement phase.

"When Social Security was set up, there were 30 employees to support every retiree, and now with the baby boomers, we're going the opposite direction: we're going to hit the one-to-one."

Most people, Ms. Hoskins added, cannot afford to support themselves as retirees in addition to an elderly parent. "People need to be saving for themselves."

The PSRC director pointed to an article published in May on former Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop's Web site, titled "The Value of Living Wills Under Fire," that says while living wills are praised and encouraged, they are often not fully effective.

One reason for that, according to the report, is that living wills are for the old and ailing. That was highlighted in the recent family, and eventually state and federal, battle over the life of Terry Schiavo, who, at only 38, did not have a living will. Both Ms. Schiavo's parents and her husband tried to speak for her.

But Ms. Hoskins said that while planning for the future is no less necessary for retirees who can potentially have 30 or 40 years of living ahead of them, the planning is not just for them.

"People don't want to talk about what to do or will just say 'oh yeah, I'll get around to it'," she said. "It's a guide for your family and your doctor to know what your feelings are."

Older adults might be turned off by the process because of the solicitation by mail, phone, or e-mail, that begins once one begins to reach retirement age, Ms. Hoskins said, adding that the promise of "free estimates" and grim messages warning that life insurance alone is not enough to cover potential needs begin to blend into a kind of junk mail white noise.

"Because they get bombarded with so much, you say 'no' to all of it," Ms. Hoskins said.

PSRC now hosts "Plan for the Future" every other year, offering lectures and workshops conducted by community members who are "not going to go away with people's addresses and phone numbers to call them.

"The focus is on education," Ms. Hoskins said.

Scheduled presenters for this Saturday's event include Vivian Greenberg, the keynote speaker, who will lecture on "A New Perspective on Healthy Aging." A local therapist and columnist for The Times of Trenton, Ms. Greenberg's presentation will kick off a series of eight workshops focusing on topics including financial planning and long-term care insurance (nursing home care, etc.). Representatives from the New Jersey Medicaid Office will also be on-hand for consultation.

Other workshops focus on the technological element involved with aging individuals, particularly, what sort of technology is available for those losing their hearing or vision. "There are things in technology that allow you to continue carrying on with your life," Ms. Hoskins said.

The closing speaker, Debbie Breslin, program director of the state Health Insurance Assistance Program, will speak on "Medicare Part D: Your Options Under the Medicare Prescription Program."

Route 1 Appliance Shop Donates HDTV to Hospital

Mrs. G TV & Appliances and Mitsubishi Electric donated a 52", high-definition DLP television to support the auction at "A November Night," a black-tie gala to benefit Princeton HealthCare System's (PHCS) new Breast Health Center.

The donation is part of Mrs. G's 70th Anniversary celebration, which will be capped by an all-day sales party this Saturday, October 1, at the store on Route One North in Lawrenceville.

"A November Night" will be held Saturday evening, November 5, on the grounds of the Morven Museum & Garden on Stockton Street in Princeton Borough. This year's event, whose theme is "The Black and White Ball," is modeled after Truman Capote's famous party in 1966. For more information about the gala, call (609) 497-4069.

30th Annual WatershedFest To Be Celebrated Saturday

The Stony Brook-Millstone Watershed Association will host the 30th annual WatershedFest on the grounds of its 830-acre reserve this Saturday, October 1. This year's theme, "A River Runs Through...," will highlight the association's role in protecting our local rivers and streams.

The 2005 festivities will feature cocktails, live music, silent and live auctions, and a catered dinner under two tents. The Fest auctions will highlight donations from many area merchants, including spa services, gift certificates for merchandise and restaurants, and tickets to cultural and sporting events. In addition, there will be many private donations of china, silver, antiques, handicrafts, collectables, and several vacation opportunities. This year's Fest will also include a raffle of two kayaks, which retail for $500 each. Tickets are $5 each, and the drawing will be held at the Fest at 9 p.m.

Tickets for the 2005 Fest are $165 per person. Last year's Fest helped raise $118,000 for the Watershed Association.

Call (609) 737-3735 to purchase tickets.

Friends of Univ. Library Will Celebrate 75th Year

During the 2005-2006 academic year, the Friends of the Princeton University Library will celebrate their 75th anniversary. The theme for the year is "The Lure of the Library: The Friends at 75," and an expanded program of events will make this a great year to join the Friends.

A series of nine talks in private homes in Princeton, New York City, and Philadelphia, will feature Charles A. Riley II, Sean Wilentz, John Sacret Young, Robert George, Daniel Rodgers, Emily Mann, Anthony Grafton, Steve Mackey and Don Skemer.

On the third Wednesdays between September and June, the library's curatorial staff will talk about what the library offers, featuring the Schelde Library, the Cotsen Children's Library, Graphic Arts, the Mudd Manuscript Library, the Marquand Library of Art and Archaeology, and the Gest Chinese rare book collection.

Four exhibitions will open during the year, each accompanied by one or more lectures: "Wonderful Stories for Pictures: Hans Christian Anderson and His Illustrators" (in celebration of the 200th anniversary of his birth); "The Lure of the Library: The Friends at 75," featuring gifts from the Friends over the years; "The Centennial of Carnegie Lake"; and "Photography and the Invention of the American West, 1850-1920." Exhibition curators will deliver gallery talks once a month on Sunday afternoons.

A cycle of lectures and workshops on the physical book will run between September and April. The lectures are open to the public and the workshops are for small groups of the Friends for a small fee.

The Friends annual dinner on January 28 will feature two Pulitzer Prize-winning poets, Paul Muldoon and C. K. Williams. The two will introduce one another, read from their work, and answer questions from the audience.

Two trips are planned: one to Philadelphia in November to see the Library Company of Philadelphia and to tour the map exhibition featuring the map collection of Henry Wendt of the Class of 1955; and the other to Washington, DC to visit various libraries including the Folger Shakespeare Library and the Library of Congress.

The anniversary celebration falls on the heals of a major capital campaign to help underwrite manuscript acquisitions by the library's special collections unit.

The celebration will end with a public lecture and dinner. That event, will mirror last April's Friends lecture when Nobel laureate Toni Morrison presented "Overdue: A Writer's Debt; A Reader's Interest."

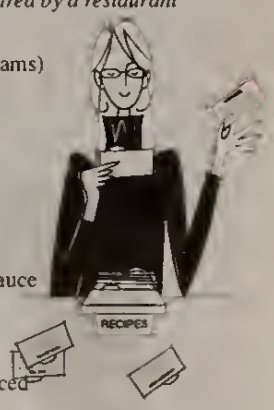
Sweet Potato Ravioli
with Brown Butter Sage Sauce & Fizzled Shallots

From a cooking class at Mercer County Community College, taught by Claire Berg. She was inspired by a restaurant experience.



2 lbs red-skinned sweet potatoes (yams)
2 tbs golden brown sugar, packed
2 tbs butter, room temperature
1/2 tsp cinnamon
1/4 tsp nutmeg
1/8 tsp allspice
12 oz. wonton wrappers
1 egg, beaten

Fried Shallots in Browned Butter sauce
1 cup oil, for frying
4 large shallots, cut crosswise
6 tbs buter
5 large sage leaves, fresh, thinly sliced
pinch crushed red pepper flakes
1/2 cups pine nuts (pignolia), toasted

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.
Oil baking sheet. Cut sweet potatoes in half lengthwise; place cut side down on baking sheet. Roast until tender, about 35 minutes, and let cool.
Scoop potato pulp out of skins into small bowl. Add sugar, butter, cinnamon, nutmeg & allspice; mash well. Season filling with salt & pepper.

Line large baking sheet pan with parchment paper. Place wonton wrappers on work surface. Using pastry brush, brush edge of wrappers with beaten egg. Place 1/2 tbp sweet potato filling in center of each. Fold each wrapper diagonally over filling, creating a triangle. Seal edges.

In a large pot of salted, simmering water, add the ravioli. Cook until they float. Remove from water with slotted spoon and drain. Top with sauce & fried shallots.

For ravioli that are not being used, transfer to parchment-lined baking sheet. Freeze, then cover and keep frozen. Can transfer to a smaller container & layer the ravioli with saran wrap in between the layers. Do not thaw before cooking.
Fried Shallots & Sauce:

Heat oil in heavy small saucepan over medium-high heat. Working in 2 batches, fry shallots until crisp and dark brown, about 2 minutes. Drain.

Cook butter in pan until beginning to brown, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Add sage, red pepper and pine nuts.

Housing Quota

could result in additional affordable units lie in any redevelopment of the 50-year-old Princeton Shopping Center, Ms. McKenzie, said, adding that "there were a number of options we have to look at."

The Township, however, has potentially fulfilled more than half of its obligation with the 56 units slated for Elm Court II on Elm Road, five assisted-living units at Acorn Glen, two Habitat for Humanity projects, and one rehabilitation project.

Committeeman Bill Enslin worried about the amount of time left for the Township to act on a plan, since the state is calling for an affordable housing plan by December. Ms. McKenzie said it was possible to come up with a plan first, and then amend it as better opportunities arise. COAH allows for an amendment process for "tweaking" the municipal affordable housing plan in the third, fifth, and eighth years of the coming cycle.

YWCA Fashion Show To Benefit Cancer Center

The first annual "in the Pink" Fashion Show and Silent Auction will be held on Friday, September 30, from 6 to 9 p.m., at The Westin Princeton Forrestal Village.

The event is designed to celebrate "the strength, beauty, and vivaciousness of breast cancer survivors, and the courage and compassion of their support network," according to Patricia Orr of the YWCA Princeton. Survivors from all over the region — as well as their husbands, children, oncologists, and social workers — will model fashions from Talbots, J. McLaughlin, Pied Piper Kids, Step by Step, and Aerosoles.

Sponsored by the Breast Cancer Resource Center of the YWCA Princeton, the event looks to remind residents of the unified team that supports each woman as she battles the disease. An official ribbon-cutting ceremony will launch October as Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

A cocktail reception and a silent and live auction will be part of Friday's events, with items such as a $3,500 Rado watch and a $1,000 diamond necklace, as well as rounds of golf at Trump National Golf Club and The Ridge at Back Brook.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the YWCA Princeton and its Breast Cancer Resource Center, dedicated to providing information and support to women and families affected by breast cancer, and to increase awareness of the disease in the community.

Tickets are $60 per person. To make reservations, call (609) 497-2100, ext. 346.

"We miss them a lot. They were the volunteers, the mentors, and people who served on boards and commissions."

For many advocates of age-restricted housing, the Ridge is one of the few areas that can accommodate seniors in close proximity to in-town amenities. The Princeton Shopping Center is just under one mile from the site.

But for those worried that the plan will upset the sensitive environmental conditions on the Ridge, the issue of the long-term efficacy of the development has come into play.

One issue is that the Hovnanian proposal, tentatively called "Four Seasons," does not provide medical or dining services. "Seniors who move there will simply have to uproot themselves at some later and more difficult point when they need such help," according to Casey Lambert, a member of Township Committee from 2002 to 2004, and a current member of the Princeton Environmental Commission.

Ms. Lambert also worried that building on that part of the Ridge would endanger flood plains to the south of the area, and cause potential damage to houses from the blasting that would be required to break through the bedrock. "At a time when Princeton is working hard to put mandated flood mitigation plans in place, it is intolerable that we should destroy a large geological landscape that plays a major role in preventing downstream flooding."

Members of the Planning Board's advisory panel, the Site Plan Review Advisory Board (SPRAB), said that the design for the development itself was incompatible with the land, and that requires too much blasting.

On the other hand, after meeting with PCV residents, Transco, the state Department of Environmental Protection, and Elizabethtown Water, which maintains a nearby waterline, Hovnanian attorney Shirleen Roberts said that Hovnanian was "proud" of its design process.

"We have not haphazardly designed the site," she said, adding that the development design conformed to Township zoning standards relating to density and open space requirements.

Township Engineer Robert Kiser said it was "possible" that the water and gas pipes could be damaged by blasting, but added that all procedures are supervised by both Transco and Elizabethtown Water representatives. Transco has indicated that blasting is acceptable, "up to a certain point," according to Hovnanian officials, but the company has not yet specifically outlined how much blasting will be permitted.

The September 29 hearing will continue at 7:30 p.m. at Township Hall. A public hearing is scheduled for that time.

Ridge Development

of open space, but we're an old neighborhood and I'm open to the idea of rezoning."

Robert Kiser, Township Engineer, said that the concerns were valid, but that the discussions were still preliminary: "Clearly, the neighbors are concerned with maintaining the integrity of their neighborhood."

George Bloosten, Ms. Fountain's husband, said the sloping nature of the Ridge would cause potential runoff onto lower properties like his. "People across the street would be impacted by runoff," he said, adding that when the neighborhood was developed, the area was regraded, bringing the potential for the underground water to surface.

Most of the lots around Woodland Drive, which include those on Hilltop Drive and Mansgrove Road, are roughly a half acre. What is unique about that area, however, is that there are additional lots behind the Woodland Drive lots that have the same owners. What can easily happen, residents fear, is that the property owners may consider subdividing those lots.

The area could, as a result, suffer if lots are increasingly subdivided, Mr. Kiser said: "To develop these lots in quarter-acre zoning would, in my estimation, be extremely difficult, and it could potentially impact neighbors in this area by creating additional runoff."

The Environmental Commission is drafting a letter outlining its concerns to the Zoning Amendment Review Committee, the Regional Planning Board of Princeton, and Township Committee.

Officials Should Act Now to Prevent Another Fatal Crash on Alexander Road

126804

To the Editor:

There are depressing parallels between the conditions that proved disastrous for New Orleans during Hurricane Katrina, and the conditions that led last week to the tragic death of Rebecca Annitto, 14, of Princeton.

The wetlands that would have helped protect New Orleans and its levees have been disappearing, and the city itself has been sinking, since the French settled there 300 years ago. For many years it has been known that the levees were inadequate to withstand a storm as strong as Katrina, and that the elderly, poor, and patients in its hospitals were among those most seriously at risk. But officials were "getting ready" to issue hospital evacuation plans, or waiting for the moment when other fiscal needs were less pressing, or otherwise postponing the day when they would actually deal with the problem.

The dangerous S-curve on Alexander Road where the crash occurred in which Rebecca Annitto died has been the site of numerous accidents over the years. With respect to the accident that killed Rebecca, the police have reportedly indicated that they do not expect to file charges against anyone; the problem is the road itself, which is unsafe in wet conditions. A young woman who had an accident there a few years ago, fortunately without injury, told me the policeman who responded said he himself had been in an accident at the same place, and that the police seemed to receive a call involving some mishap there almost every time it rained.

The mayor of West Windsor, where this curve on Alexander Road is located, stated that earlier this year it was listed by the town's engineering department as the number one "problem traffic area." Although straightening the road was recommended, the mayor reportedly said this was "not going to happen overnight," because "it has to go through the governing process and budgeting, plus review and study." The mayor said that the work would be covered by the next budget, but we have all seen how budget priorities change when the spotlight of public scrutiny moves on to something else.

West Windsor has got to move expeditiously and to involve other levels of government, if necessary, to get this very dangerous problem solved. I commend the mayor for saying he would push for both interim safety measures and permanent straightening of the road. Now he needs to follow through, and interim safety measures must be implemented immediately. I call upon the West Windsor authorities, Mercer County, and the State to move as quickly as possible to prevent another tragedy on Alexander Road. I attended the funeral of Rebecca Annitto, which was profoundly moving, beautiful, and very, very terrible. I hope never to attend another funeral like it.

Parents, Students Urged to Complete Survey About Safe Routes to School

To the Editor:

This week Princeton Regional Schools is distributing a brief survey about transportation to schools. Students at all four elementary schools, Princeton Charter School, the John Witherspoon Middle School, and the High School will receive the survey.

I encourage all high school students and parents with elementary and middle school children to fill out this survey (by Wednesday, October 5). It will give the school district and the two local governments information about our community's interest in safe routes to walk and bike to school. It will also point out the barriers that kids encounter if they walk or bike to school, or would like to but cannot do so safely.

The survey is sponsored by the Township's Sidewalk and Bicycle Advisory Committee, in collaboration with the Princeton Regional Planning Board, Princeton Regional Schools, and Borough and Township officials, including the engineering, planning, and police departments.

It seems to me that there is momentum in this community to make routes to school safer so that more students have the healthy option of walking or biking to school. Let's see.

Township Committee Candidate Vows To Hold Line on Future Tax Increases

To the Editor:

Tom Pyle and I are candidates for Princeton Township Committee. As we consider issues, this letter will focus on two: taxes and financial transparency.

Stories are circulating regarding Township residents who have been forced to move due to high local taxes, raising major concerns about fairness and Township diversity. Over the past five years, Township taxes have increased a cumulative total of about 50 percent. This year, Township taxes increased over 10 percent, and are projected to increase 19 percent and 16 percent in years 2006 and 2007 respectively.

If we plug in these numbers, then continue with the average rate of increase over the prior five years, what is the result? Township taxes will double in five years! Double your taxes in five years? Why? Why did none of the current Township Committee members vote against the 2005 budget? Why has not even one member of Township Committee voted against a budget during any of the past six years?

Princeton taxpayers deserve proper financial reporting — clear, concise, public, and prompt. We are not getting it. The capable and hardworking Township financial professionals are not the cause of this failing. Blame lies with an arrogant Township Committee. For example, the Township audited financial statements for the year 2004 will likely not be released until after the election. Why? Normally, the financials are released by early summer. Is our one-party Township Committee avoiding disclosure of unfavorable financial information prior to the election?

Tom Pyle and I will work to limit tax increases to no more than inflation, with a longer-term goal of decreasing taxes. We will direct the Township to post on its website a simple, sensible "dashboard" of financial indicators, providing all Township residents with easily-understood financial information — information which our current administration apparently would prefer you not to see.

Local taxes are rising too fast. Township financials are not being disclosed promptly, clearly, and simply. We will combat these ills, as new voices, as catalysts for a new beginning in Princeton Township.

Ill-Advised Bunn Drive Development Deserves Rejection by Planning Board

To the Editor:

Last Thursday the Regional Planning Board of Princeton heard an application to build market-rate senior housing on Bunn Drive. I was astounded that some members of the Planning Board seemed intent on approving the application despite the unanimous and emphatic objections of the Site Plan Review Advisory Board and the Princeton Environmental Commission. These advisory bodies, which consist of volunteer residents of both Princetons, had a wide range of reasons to recommend rejection of the application. Several of these reasons were based on the fact that the rock at the site consists of the impermeable and extremely hard basalt that underlies most of Princeton Ridge. It will be an engineering feat, indeed, to build the proposed underground parking garages in basalt that can only be excavated by blasting. As a geologist who has taught at Princeton University since 1968, every year I take my students to the Ridge to study this impressive rock. The rock is exceedingly tough because of the interlocking crystals that formed as the liquid basalt cooled a few thousand feet below the earth's surface. It is the same rock that forms the Palisades on the Hudson, which was blasted through for I-95 to reach George Washington Bridge.

Why would anyone want to serve on an advisory body whose well-considered advice is dismissed? I can't believe that Princeton politicians can make decisions that continue to ignore the truth of the terrain. No package of variances can cover over the fact that Princeton Ridge is made of basalt. It cannot be bulldozed away.

After the applicant completes its presentation this Thursday, the Planning Board will hear public comment. I hope the Planning Board will require the applicant to resubmit an application that all of us, including this senior, can live with.

Borough Should Spring for Sidewalk From Library Plaza to Nearby Stores

To the Editor:

I cannot believe that the Borough says it's not possible to build a safe sidewalk off the new Witherspoon Plaza that would lead into the Spring Street stores already there. Pedestrian safety? No, the Borough is capable of building wondrous things, so why not a little sidewalk? If the powers that be are thinking that these businesses stand to benefit from back-door access that they didn't pay for, well, I think that living through the extremely long, hot, noisy days of construction is payment enough.

Come on, everyone, where is our generosity of spirit? Let's make our new plaza a cozy and convenient meeting place for all of us, the Spring Street stores included.

Organizers Thank Those Responsible For Pettoranello Gardens Concerts

To the Editor:

On September 10 and 17, Pettoranello Gardens Amphitheater once again set the stage for quality, culturally diverse, and original musical performances offered free to the greater Princeton community. With one night rock-and-roll and the other world and Latin-American music, the concerts had something to offer persons of all music tastes. Both nights had packed audiences; in fact, during the second night the music inspired participants to get up out of the stands and dance on the informal stage next to the bands.

Blue Curtain, organizer of this new concert series, would like to thank all of those whose hard work made these concerts such a success.

Thanks to the musical groups who performed — progressive rock band Lofash, "three-car-garage band" Rackett, Latin-American ensemble Eco Del Sur, and Puerto Rican Bomba & Plena percussion and dance ensemble Segunda Quimbamba — as well as Katie Herlihy and the Princeton Recreation Department, Sue Bannon, Randi Lund, Ruben Jaffe, and lastly, everyone who attended and shared an improved quality of life during some of the last summer nights of the year.

This non-partisan organization's mission is to advocate for the resident – homeowners of Princeton Township who fear that they will be financially driven from this town.

Our goal is to hold elected officials accountable for making the most prudent use of available resources and limit any justifiable future spending and tax increase to the rate of inflation.

We believe strongly in preserving the economic diversity in Princeton, not having it become another Wall Street bedroom community.

We welcome your input, ideas and participation.

Melanie Clarke is a Master Musician and Committed Volunteer to the Community

The universal communication of ideas and emotions through music is very important to Melanie Clarke. Music has shaped her life from her early childhood to her 16 years as a violinist with the Princeton Symphony Orchestra to her desire to share it with the youngest members of the community through Bravo!, the orchestra's outreach program to area schools, which Ms. Clark founded and developed.

Her lifelong love of music is due in great part to her mother's efforts to ensure that the family was exposed to and developed an appreciation of classical music, explains Ms. Clarke.

"My mom had fallen in love with music, and she wanted us to share in her love of it, and have this cultural experience. Our house was filled with music all the time, including the Saturday afternoon radio broadcasts of opera and all of us practicing our various instruments."

One of six children (five girls and one boy) born to Armand and Mary Duffy Cognetta, Ms. Clarke grew up in Stamford, and later North Haven, Conn. Her father, a physician, was on the faculty of Yale Medical School, and her mother was a nurse.

"My father was from an Italian family, and my mother was Irish," says Ms. Clarke. "Her father had immigrated to Amenia, N.Y., which was then an enclave for intellectuals, such as Lewis Mumford, and she grew up among them."

Because of Dr. Cognetta's struggles with depression, Melanie's mother took on extra responsibilities to guarantee the family's well-being. "My mom worked on and off as a nurse, and she made us feel secure," remembers Ms. Clarke. "My father's difficulties were hard on the family. It upset me, and I worried that we might not be safe. But my mother was very strong, and had a strong religious faith. She stressed how much she loved my father and how much we should love him."

Music Lessons

She adds that all the children in the family were given music lessons and taken to special concerts and performances of such famous musicians as soprano Birgit Nielson, pianist Artur Rubenstein, and violinist Mischa Elman.

"My mom wanted us to be the best we could be" reports Ms. Clarke. "She had to rob Peter to pay Paul to come up with the money for our music lessons, but somehow she managed. I started private violin lessons at six, and my mother got me a violin from Ladislav Kaplan, a string- and violin-maker. We bought two: a ½ size, and a ¾ size. I still have them.

"I loved the violin right away," she continues, "and I'd get up and practice an hour every day before school. My teacher was very important in making me feel special, which gave me confidence. Eventually, he gave me a scholarship for the lessons."

The opportunity for a one-on-one relationship with a teacher is crucial, she points out. "I believe the one or two hours a week you spend with a teacher is an unmatched educational experience. You are spending time with a master. When they give their child music lessons, parents give them that special opportunity with a teacher.

"One of the themes that I have carried through in my own life is that my kids have all studied music and play an instrument. It is important for the exposure, to instill a love of music, and it is an emotional outlet for them."

Melanie played violin in the Youth Symphony Orchestra in Stamford when she eight and nine, and also branched out with timpani in the school band.

Music was her great love, but she was also active in sports, including the girls track and basketball teams in high school, and swimming.

"I enjoyed school," she reports. "I was a good student. I liked to do what was asked of me, and I especially enjoyed English. After school and on weekends, I had baby sitting jobs, liked to sew, and made a lot of my own clothes. I especially loved to see the musicals on Broadway, including West Side Story and Camelot, my favorite."

Happy Childhood

Despite her father's problems, Ms. Clarke remembers a happy childhood. "We were all very close to each other. One of my happiest memories is that somehow my mother figured out a way to put in an above-ground pool in the yard, and we had many hours of fun in that pool.

"I also really looked up to my sister, Meg. She was two years older, and she was beautiful, gifted, smart, athletic, had lots of boy friends, and yet she always had her eye on the ball academically. She charged ahead and led the way for the rest of us. Today, she a professional concert pianist."

Ms. Clarke adds that summer jobs as an au pair during high school were especially significant. "This was a very formative experience. I went to Massachusetts, Vermont, and northern Connecticut, and each of those jobs clued me in to different styles of family living. In Massachusetts, it was the first time, I was in a family that had a huge amount of money. They were new to it, and really didn't know how to handle it or guide their kids.

"The Vermont location in Greensboro in the Northern Kingdom was very important," she continues. "We ended up renting the house in Vermont from the family later, and then we eventually built our own house there on Lake Caspian. In the Connecticut family, the mother was a professor at Columbia, and the dad was a lawyer. It showed me a good example of how to balance a significant professional career with a family."

It was in high school that Melanie met John Clarke, her husband-to-be. You never know who will turn up at the next locker!

"Our lockers were right next to each other," she says, with a smile. "He was captain of the football and basketball teams, and was very smart. He came from a family of nine kids, so we both knew about big families. His mother, Ellen Clarke, became very important in my life. In sophomore year, he asked me out, and I was thrilled. I was crazy about him. I adored him!"

VIOLINIST & VIRTUOSO: "My mom took me to a concert at a church in Stamford, Conn. when I was five. I saw this woman play the violin, and she had on a beautiful dress. I decided I wanted to play the violin so I could have a dress like that!" Melanie Clarke, shown at her Princeton home, indeed went on to study violin and has performed with the Princeton Symphony Orchestra for 16 years.

Full Scholarship

Melanie's musical talent singled her out as a performer during high school, and after graduation, she attended the Oberlin Conservatory. "I chose Oberlin," she explains, "because I wanted to study with a specific teacher, and also my sister Meg was there. But then, the teacher left, and I transferred to Wellesley, where I had a full scholarship."

In college, she was also able to study with Broadus Earle, a violinist who taught at the Yale School of Music. In addition, she played with the M.I.T. Symphony Orchestra, serving as concert master. "We went on nationwide tours with the M.I.T. Symphony, and we did several works with composer John Harbison (a Princeton native).

Wellesley's proximity to Harvard, where John Clarke was a student, was certainly not lost on Melanie either, and the two continued to see each other regularly.

At Wellesley, in a startling departure from her lifelong interest in music, she chose to major in healthcare planning. "At Wellesley," she explains, "they inculcated you with their mission, which was 'to minister to, not to be ministered to.' I began to think about 'what will I do with my life?' I didn't want to be a professional musician. I was afraid that the competiveness and stress of that life could take away the joy of the music. Growing up in a family of medical professionals, I was always interested in the healthcare delivery system. I also took courses at M.I.T., and worked in the Cambridge City Hospital."

After graduation in 1976, she received a fellowship to the School of Public Health at Harvard, where she also studied at the Kennedy School of Government, the Law School, and the Business School. In 1978, she earned a master's degree in health policy and management.

She and John Clarke were married in June after her graduation, and over the next few years, lived in Mobile, Ala., Boston, and New York City, where she worked in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's Health Systems Agency (Mobile) and later in various healthcare consulting jobs.

Maternity Leave

"Then, in 1980, John went to Wharton School of Business in Philadelphia to get an MBA, and we lived in Philadelphia until 1989," recalls Ms. Clarke. "I worked for Oberfest, a hospital management consulting firm. We did strategic planning and facility planning for hospitals, and I loved it. The job also provided important income for our family, and got my husband through graduate school. While I was there, I had the first maternity leave they ever gave, the second maternity leave they ever gave, and the third maternity leave they ever gave!"

Indeed, by this time, the Clarke family had come to include daughters Julia, Noelle, and Ellen. A fourth daughter, Isabelle, was born in Princeton in 1992.

Also during those years, she was able to resume her love affair with music, playing the violin with the Haddonfield Symphony Orchestra, a semi-professional orchestra.

"After John received his degree, he joined DSV, a venture capital firm in Princeton, and when I had my third child, I stopped working," says Ms. Clarke. "We loved Philadelphia and had a great old house in Center City, but we decided to give Princeton a try. At first, I was a bit confused after the move. I wasn't sure what to do. The girls were now five, three, and six months, and they really grew up here. Now, I love Princeton. It's a great place to raise children, and John has his own venture capital firm, Cardinal Partners, on Nassau Street."

Music soon reasserted itself as a central part of her life. As she says, "We moved here two days before Christmas, and the first thing I did in early January was to audition for Mark Laycock, and I was accepted into the Princeton Symphony Orchestra (PSO)."

Mr. Laycock, now celebrating his 20th year as musical director, is a big fan of Ms. Clarke and her contribution to the orchestra and the community. "Melanie Clarke is the rarest of individuals, whose time, talents, brilliance, resources, boundless energy, and love are all given completely, gracefully to others that their lives will be made better and more joyful. She is an amazing individual who truly makes the world a better place, and we are so very fortunate to have her in the Princeton community."

"I loved the orchestra from the beginning," says Ms. Clarke. "In addition to allowing me to play, it soon evolved into a volunteer outlet for me."

Most significantly, it led her to establish Bravo! ("Bringing Renowned Artists for Valuable Outreach"), an outreach program in area schools to introduce children to classical music and the symphony orchestra through live performances.

Children's Concert

As Ms. Clarke explains, "It came about 10 years ago, when Joan Zisler, the music teacher at Community Park School, asked me to demonstrate string instruments to her third grade class. I took in a cello, double bass, viola, and violin. When I went again, I asked Mark Laycock to come too, and he wrote a script that explored the question: 'How does a composer compose a piece of music?' He recruited players, and we demonstrated the string instruments while answering this question.

"The same year, the orchestra received a one-time grant to do a children's concert at Richardson Auditorium. With these two activities, the in-school performances and the children's orchestra concert, the idea for Bravo! was born," she continues. "I began to think about expanding, too. Why not hit all the Princeton elementary schools and also bring in other instruments?"

For the first several years, Ms. Clarke worked as a volunteer, focused on completing the in-school series, so that all the families of instruments could be brought into classes, on increasing the number of schools and districts visited, and on expanding the number of concerts, so that all children visited in their classrooms would hear the orchestra in concert.

In time, the program grew to include four different innovative ensembles — strings, woodwinds, brass, and percussion, going to schools in Princeton, Hopewell, Montgomery, South Brunswick, North Brunswick, and Trenton.

"We go to second, third, fourth, and fifth grades with the different ensembles," says Ms. Clarke. "Last year, we did 90 ensemble programs and seven concerts, reaching 16,000 kids in the classes and performances. We bring them to Richardson Auditorium or the State Theater for our concert in May. There is nothing like a live performance. Hearing a live performance of classical music by professional musicians in a very exciting manner is a wonderful experience. These kids are the audiences of the future."

And it is making a difference, she adds. "More and more families are interested in getting their kids music lessons because of the program."

Without Charge

All the visits to classrooms and the performances are without charge, she points out. Funding is provided by organizations and individuals. "I am so proud of the Bravo! program and all who have made it possible," says Ms. Clarke, who has recently been appointed Director of Development and Outreach for PSO, after previously serving as Director of Education.

"I am grateful to the orchestra and the board for giving me the opportunity to develop Bravo! It is a gift to the community and the surrounding community. Our outreach progam is as good as what any program is doing now.

"I love working with Mark Laycock," she continues. "This program wouldn't be anywhere without Mark. He is totally behind it. And none of this would be done without the behind-the-scenes presence in a very powerful but quiet way of Betty Wold Johnson. She has really backed and shared the vision of bringing classical music to the children of Princeton, Trenton, and the area. Without her and her generosity, this program would not exist. She is our biggest angel."

Bravo! would certainly not exist without Melanie Clarke, adds John Hamel, former President of the Board of PSO. "Melanie has done a magnificent job with the Bravo! program. Bravo! is now a major part of the orchestra's reputation. As far as I know, the strength and breadth of it is unique among symphony orchestras. I don't know of many other orchestras, even major, that have as fine a program for young people as Princeton Symphony Orchestra, and that is due to the energy, wisdom, organizational skill, and enthusiasm of one Melanie Clarke. And there's no question about that!"

Ms. Clarke's efforts in establishing Bravo! were a factor in her selection earlier this year as one of 14 women honored by the Princeton YWCA's annual "Tribute to Women." She was singled out for her work in other fields as well, including civic, charitable, and school-related organizations in Princeton, and beyond.

Among the many contributions cited were her work over 14 years for Community Park School, including fundraising, enrichment, social and appreciation events, and a term as co-president of the PTO. In addition, she was noted for serving on the board and as president of the Familyborn Birthing Center and for currently working on the capital campaign for its sister organization, HiTops.

The citation went on to say, "Ms. Clarke is a volunteer for Hands Together, a relief agency in Haiti. With members of her family, she has visited Hands Together projects, and she does fundraising appeals for it at Catholic parishes in the U.S. She is a trustee of The Lawrenceville School and is co-chair of The Lawrenceville Parents' Fund. She serves on the YWCA's Friends committee and the education committee for Young Audiences of N.J.

"In Greensboro, Vt., she is a trustee and vice president of the Greensboro Association, involved with protecting the local environment. She helped found and is a chamber music coach at the Craftsbury Music Festival's summer youth program in Craftsbury, Vt."

Making Music

Ms. Clarke's long-time friend Sue Anne Steffey Morrow, now school chaplain at The Lawrenceville School, underscores Ms. Clarke's willingness to lend a hand when needed. "I have known Melanie since our daughters, now in college, were in first grade together and were both Brownies. Whether helping Brownies achieve their cooking badge, or chairing the John Witherspoon 8th grade prom, or initiating, creating, designing Bravo!, or chairing the Parents' Fund at The Lawrenceville School — everything she undertakes, Melanie accomplishes with diligence and hard work, grace and finesse, and she knows how to have fun and make fun along the way. She is one of the finest women I know, with a heart of gold. She would do anything for anyone in trouble amidst all of her commitments and accomplishments.

Melanie Clarke

"And I love watching her as she plays in the Princeton Symphony Orchestra, her great gift of making music."

Another close friend of many years, Princeton resident Cynthia Hillas, agrees, and emphasizes Ms. Clarke's deep commitment to whatever she takes on. "I want to talk about her passion. It's not just the many services and good works she does for the community; it's the passionate inspiration she brings that encourages others to follow in her lead. She is willing to step out and bring other people with her.

"I speak from experience. When, together, we both had eight kids under the age of eight, she called me up and said 'I think we should co-chair the Community Park PTO. I want you to do this with me. Just because we have eight kids doesn't mean we can't do this.' And we did, and it worked out fine.

"I also want to say that it's always fun to do things with Melanie, and there is always lots of interest and humor."

Ms. Clarke is quick to praise the work of others as being essential to what she has accomplished. "In everything I have done here, I've been in the company of great women who devote themselves to bettering this town. There is a great volunteer ethic here."

That is one of the things, among others, that she especially likes about Princeton. "People are always trying to improve things here," she remarks. "The dialogue about issues is very lively, and sometimes polarized, which can be frustrating. But ultimately, things get accomplished. I am so proud of the community for building the library, for example."

After 16 years in Princeton, she has come to appreciate its virtues and opportunities. "I love Princeton's size and scale. It's manageable. I can get to where I want to go. The University adds a tremendous enriching component, and we try to go to things there. The Institute for Advanced Study is another important asset. And, don't forget, Princeton is physically beautiful."

Dinner Parties

Like many musicians, Ms. Clarke is also a good cook. "I enjoy it," she says. "For 10 years at Community Park School, I had the Teachers' Appreciation Lunch. And when I have time to do it, I love to have people over to eat and have dinner parties."

Another of her biggest pleasures is the two months the family spends every summer in their Vermont home. "It is beautiful there, and a chance for us to unwind and relax,' she notes.

There won't be too much time for that now, with a new Princeton Symphony Orchestra season about to begin on Sunday, October 2, and with her new responsibilities for outreach and development.

"The orchestra gives me so much," she says. "The opportunity to play, which is a creative outlet for me and an emotional release. It soothes my soul. At the same time, playing in the orchestra is the most demanding and challenging thing I do, and so stimulating. I have to go to the edge creatively and mentally every time.

"Now, I am looking forward to this new phase of my career with the orchestra. I am eager to do whatever I can to preserve, enrich, and sustain the Princeton Symphony Orchestra and bring it alive to as many people as possible, and make it a part of their lives. I am happy to have the opportunity to move into the management aspect of it, which is really critical to its future. And it is perfect timing for me. It has come when the kids are leaving the nest, and I want something meaningful to do.

"Women have a tough row to hoe, to have a meaningful career and raise children," she adds. "It can be difficult, but there are ways to create a life for yourself encompassing both. But you have to be open to it and flexible. Don't close down. And certainly, it's a big help to have a very supportive husband."

Ms. Clarke speaks from personal experience, she points out. "I look up to my husband so much. In the last 10 years, as I have extended myself more in organizations, and there have been more things to juggle, I always ask his advice. He is a very generous-hearted and good-humored man. I am so lucky I met him when I was 14!

"I also want to say that my childhood and my mother's example have made me treasure my own family life. I am so fortunate to have such a caring husband and four wonderful daughters to share my life with."

Author Susan Crites Price To Speak at PACF Event

Author Susan Crites Price has written a guide to help parents, teachers, and other adults instill the spirit of giving and volunteering in children.

The Giving Family: Raising Our Children to Help Others is a useful how-to guide for parents that highlights the importance of exposing kids to philanthropy and volunteerism, and includes age-appropriate examples, tips, exercises, and resources.

The Princeton Area Community Foundation's (PACF) Fund for Women and Girls and PNC Advisors will hold a talk with Ms. Price on Wednesday, September 28, at the Nassau Club, at 5 p.m.

It's never too early — or too late — to start teaching children the habits of giving. The child who learns to give to others is the child who has found life's real treasure, said the author. Teenagers in the U.S. spend approximately $141 billion a year. With consumerism at an all-time high, many children believe their value as a person comes from what they get for themselves: the latest fashions or the hottest electronics.

Ms. Price is with Family Foundation Services at the Council on Foundations. She is the co-author, along with her husband, Tom, of The Working Parents Help Book, a guide to juggling kids and careers, which won a Parents Choice Award and was a selection of the Scholastic Book Club.

She is also the author of The Complete Idiots Guide to Child Safety. Ms. Price has appeared on numerous television and radio programs, including Oprah and the Today Show, and she co-wrote the weekly "Working Parent Lifeline" column distributed by the New York Times Service.

To make a reservation for this event, call PACF at (609) 219-1800, or e-mail info@pacf.rog.

Editor, Authors to Speak On Works at U-Store

John Stachel, editor of Einstein's Miraculous Yeor: Five Papers that Changed the Face of Physics, will appear at the Princeton U-Store on Thursday, September 29, at 7 p.m. The talk and book signing is part of a year-long series of events celebrating Einstein's 1905 papers and the World Year of Physics.

After 1905, physics would never be the same again. In those 12 months, Einstein shattered many cherished scientific beliefs with five papers that would establish him as the world's leading physicist. Einstein's Miroculous Year brings those papers together in an accessible format.

The book, which presents these papers in a modern English translation, shows work that is among the high points of human achievement and marks a watershed in the history of science, according to the book's publicist.

Mr. Stachel is Professor of Physics Emeritus at Boston University, where he directs the Center for Einstein Studies.

"Restless Giant"

On Monday, October 3, Restless Giant author James T. Patterson will appear at the Princeton U-Store at 7 p.m.

Mr. Patterson is Ford Foundation Professor of History Emeritus at Brown University. He is the author of Grand Expectations: The United States, 1945-1974, which won a Bancroft Prize. He also authored Brown v. Board of Education: A Civil Rights Milestone ond Its Troubled Legacy.

Restless Giant provides a concise assessment of the 27 years between the resignation of Richard Nixon and the election of George W. Bush, in a narrative that weaves together social, cultural, political, economic, and international developments. The reader meets some of the era's many memorable figures, most notably Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton. The author explores the idea of "culture wars," where liberals and conservatives, including a resurgent Religious Right, appeared to cut the country in two.

"Democracy and Tradition"

Jeffrey Stout, author of Democracy and Tradition, will appear at the Princeton U-Store on Wednesday, October 5, at 7 p.m.

Mr. Stout is a professor of religion at Princeton University. He is the author of Ethics after Babel, also by Princeton University Press, as well as essays and reviews in such journals as The Monist, New Literary History, and The Journal of Religion. He is a contributing editor to the Journal of Religious Ethics.

Drawing inspiration from Whitman, Dewey, and Ellison, Mr. Stout discusses the fate of virtue, the legacy of racism, the moral issues implicated in the war on terrorism, and the objectivity of ethical norms. He argues that modern democracy can provide a moral vision and has made possible such moral achievements as civil rights precisely because it allows a multitude of claims to be heard.

The Princeton U-Store is located at 36 University Place, just off Nassau Street. There is free parking directly across the street.

For more information on these or other U-Store events, call (609) 921-8500, ext. 238, or visit www.pustore.com.

The Princeton Public Library

ART REVIEW

The Vision of Community in a World of Books

Say it's an early autumn afternoon in 1985 and you do a Rip Van Winkle, falling asleep under a tree in the Kingston cemetery to wake up 20 years later thinking only a day has passed. Walking into Princeton you can tell things are not quite the same, and as Rt. 27 becomes Nassau Street you notice plenty of changes, enough to suggest that your nap lasted way more than a day, but nothing to make you drop your jaw. Some places are gone, some have changed names, and yet everything feels the same, maybe because it's getting dark and fall is in the air. A glance toward the campus brings no major surprises. Nassau Hall is gently alight and looking as subtle, dignified, and beautiful as it did in 1985.

Figuring that the Princeton Public Library is the most likely place to find out what's been going on in the world since he fell asleep, old Rip turns right and heads down Witherspoon.

Here's where his jaw drops.

What happened to the library? What's that four-story torch lighting up the sky across the street from where Griggs Corner Amoco used to be?

Maybe you, too, have experienced a few Rip Van Winkle moments driving or walking past the new library since it opened. You can almost take it for granted in the daytime, but when all its lights are blazing it's still an amazement.

The old library was no slouch architecturally, after all, but at night it looked muted and modest. It didn't come at you with palatial pillars; it didn't glitter and gleam like a diamond as big as the Ritz; nor did it create the illusion of candlelit shelves ranged within the brilliance, a touch of medieval library mystery housed in a resplendently contemporary display case. When you pass through the tall doors you know how it used to feel to walk into great public spaces back in the days when railway terminals, movie theaters, and libraries were built on the grand scale.

Inside you can find cozy lounges, classy carpeting, fireplaces, statues, a shop, a cafe, a big community room for readings and performances and the upcoming Friends of the Library Book Sale. Art graces every floor. Art, however, can seem at a disadvantage when it's displayed in a place where people are reading, browsing, studying, or surfing the web. The photographs of Ricardo Barros can be seen on the second floor through October 30, but how many busy people using the high-tech equipment will take time to ponder the negative print of a man in profile you may mistake for a lion at first glance or the one of a figure looming in a black overcoat, shoes sunk in snow, as he stands facing the Manhattan skyline when the Twin Towers were still there, a manikin propped on his shoulder.

TYING IT ALL TOGETHER: With some help from people in the community, the Korean artist Ik-Joong Kang created a mosaic of Princeton and put it on a wall in the first floor of the new library building.

How many patrons even know of the ceramic art of Katherine Hackl in the Princeton Collection Room, which seems to be off-limits much of the time? This is tile heaven and it should be seen, even if you have to ask a librarian to let you in for a look.

"Happy World"

It's safe to say that the most popular work of art in the library and the most accessible is the one filling the wall of the corridor off the lobby entrance, the patchwork parade people entering from the new parking deck see before they see anything else. Ik-Joong Kang's mixed-media wall mosaic of 3,700 three-by-three inch tiles, "Happy World," is a masterful collaboration with and about the Princeton community.

Try the Van Winkle point of view again. You can almost see him leaning on his cane, shoulders stooped, mouth a little less agape as he muses and smiles his way up and down and across the wall of many colors. However overwhelmed he might have been by the brave new world of the building and all its 21st-century machinery, he can find familiar things here, ordinary images from the previous century, messages like "For me, real entertainment is the interplay between heart and mind," not in cold type but written by hand. You know he'd smile to read a poem called "The Prayer of the Fox" by an eight-year-old. What better way to ease his entry back into the world on the other side of his long nap?

Try another, darker point of view: with the devastation of Katrina in mind, this conglomeration of odds and ends can be turned around to represent the opposite of a happy world, the flotsam and jetsam of civilization swept away in a chaotic tide, not unlike the letters and photos and souvenirs and cherished scraps of memory destroyed by the hurricane and the flood in New Orleans. Turn it at another angle and the wall becomes a magnificent salvage job, a whole community of items rescued in a single playful vision, a quilt of many colors that ultimately holds its own against the forces of nature: happy, yes, and bright, and bountiful.

Now try the poet/anthropologist's point of view. Imagine someone at an archaeological dig in 3005 looking for clues to the way we lived in this melange of plastic dogs, coffee mugs, toy cars, keys with faded tags you can almost read, a notice from 1909 about the Free Public Library, a bowling pin, a Buddha, the exposed innards of a parking meter, a badminton racket, a harmonica, playing cards, a squash racket, a Phish CD, a compass, the faces of children you seem to know, and families, and even a library card from that piece of antiquity called a card catalogue. In the end, the diggers speculate that this ancient mural must have enjoyed a prominent place in the town's most prominent building, the center of the community, where people came to enjoy it and smile and be assured that the thread of art somehow tied their world together.

That's the beauty of it: it all works, it balances out. The Happy World imagery is picked up in other library art: in the pattern and colors of the quilt above the fireplace on the second floor, in Margaret K. Johnson's layered textiled wall sculpture, in the use of thread in Buzz Spector's "The Irony" and "What Next," even in the doll's house and the aquarium on the third floor, and especially in Faith Ringgold's cut glass tile mosaic "Tar Beach" with its deep blue urban night sky, family at table, kids on a blanket, and a figure taking flight in the sky.

Ik-Joong Kang was born in Korea near an American military base whose souvenir shop gave him an early look at the cross-cultural interface he would later explore, manifesting the idea that nothing is trivial; that nothing is merely, boringly random but can make funny sense when you put it in a fertile context; that coincidence is art, everything's in play, everything's of use, because, as this artist has said (probably on one of his haiku-like tiles): "Art is easy."

Arts Council Announces Fall Program Schedule

The Arts Council of Princeton recently announced its fall schedule of programming, exhibitions, and classes at its conTEMPORARY Arts Center at the Princeton Shopping Center.

Its scheduled moving date is set for Thursday, September 29, construction permitting, after which its offices, located at the southernmost end of the Shopping Center next to Eckerd Drugs, will be open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Arts Council will remain in its temporary location while construction is underway on it Paul Robeson Center for the Arts, due to be completed in spring 2007.

Many have asked when construction will begin on the Arts Council's Robeson Center for the Arts. Commencement of construction on the renovation and expansion project has been delayed because bids came in over the estimates, due primarily to escalation in materials and transportation costs. The Arts Council's building committee has been busy working with the Michael Graves's team on ways to bring the price down while retaining the integrity of the building design. The Arts Council expects that the budget will be resolved in the coming weeks so that the construction process can move forward.

Just in time for October, National Arts and Humanities Month, some of the upcoming events include the first exhibition in the conTEMPORARY Gallery, "artTools," an exhibition of sculptural objects constructed by local artist Charles Ilich. The show will run from September 29 through October 29, construction permitting, with an artist reception and open house celebration of the new space on October 22, at 6 p.m., to coincide with Café Improv at 8:30 p.m., an eclectic cabaret of music, poetry, and comedy. Café Improv is a not-for-profit affair under the aegis of the Arts Council and has won local and national awards. Participants can sign up to perform on the Web site, at www.cafeimprov.com. Both programs are open to the public, and the latter costs one dollar.

Also coming up on October 15, is the Arts Council's annual benefit Dining by Design. Each year this event brings together Princeton's community of artists and art lovers for an evening of creative experiences, sumptuous cuisine, and an auction of many treasures. The proceeds provide essential support for the free community and youth programming at the Arts Council. For ticket information, call (609) 924-8777, ext. 102.

Other upcoming events in the new space will be the Halloween Parade on October 27, the Spooky Saturday Family Fun Day Workshop on October 29 — co-sponsored by the Princeton University Art Museum and featuring a gargoyle tour of the University campus — as well as the biannual poetry slam on November 4, and, in the conTEMPORARY Gallery, the annual Sauce for the Goose holiday arts and crafts sale, opening early this year on November 10.

The show features a mix of fine arts and functional crafts — including paintings, drawings, functional and decorative ceramics, holiday ornaments, greeting cards, and photography — created by local artists and on sale throughout the holiday season. As a new addition this year, the spirit of Sauce will continue all year long with a conTEMPORARY Store featuring an assortment of works of art crafted by local artists.

All adult, teen, and children's classes will begin the week of October 17, and registration is currently underway. All classes, except Adult Ceramics, will take place at the Shopping Center space; Adult Ceramics will take place at Warehouse 5B in Princeton Business Park at 5 Crescent Avenue in Rocky Hill, a 10-minute drive from the Princeton Shopping Center. For directions, call (609) 924-8777, ext. 101, or visit www.artscouncilofprinceton.org.

Classic favorites and fresh additions are offered for all levels of expertise in painting, drawing, ceramics, mixed media, photography, creative writing, drama, and dance. All classes are taught by experienced and encouraging instructors in small-sized groups in a comfortable and supportive atmosphere.

For adventurous adults, there are several new classes to choose from, including Study of the Head for Beginners, an oil painting class that employs the classical method of reproducing the masters. Also offered are Watercolor Sketchbook, an exploration of color, design, and composition, and Experiment with Acrylic, a one-day workshop delving into abstraction and the method of layering.

Also new is Basic Drawing in Black and White, an introduction into the fundamentals of drawing. Black-and-white photography for beginning and intermediate students is also offered, as well as a range of ceramics classes that explore handbuilding and throwing methods, a Guided Writing Group for novice and experienced writers, and, for those who want to kick up their heels a bit, Flamenco Dancing.

Also starting up in October is an imaginative assortment of unique and engaging art classes for children and teens. For youngsters eager to get their hands dirty, there are ceramics classes for ages 5 to 7 and 8 to 12 with a focus in handbuilding with clay and mixed media. There are drawing classes for all ages: Realistic Drawing for ages 6 to 9, Exploring Your "Self" through Drawing for ages 10 to 12, Drawing from Reality and Imagination for teens, and, new this semester for teens, Comic Book Art: Personal Narrative through Sequential Art.

There are also several new classes in mixed media, including Composition in Pencil and Paint for ages 9 to 12, Drawing into Painting for teens, and — for ages 4 to 8 — Mixed Media Fun, an exploration of color and texture with water-based paints, collage materials, plaster, and papier-mâché, for 2-D as well as 3-D work.

All materials are included for all children's and teen classes.

All submissions must include the artist's name, brief biography, address, and daytime phone number. Those wishing to have the items returned should include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Artists should submit recent work that is available for exhibit and sale. All submissions must include a $10 check (for up to five submissions) payable to: TDA/Gallery 125. Indicate the top and front of all slides. Images that are submitted on CD must be "jpg" files.

Participating artists are encouraged and expected to gallery sit for an average of two hours per week during the exhibit. For more information, email gallery125@trenton-downtown.com, or call (609) 989-9119.

Ideas from Jerry & Véronique, Owners, Fast Frame Montgomery & West Windsor

GROUPING FRAMED PIECES

When you have a collection of photos, artwork, and other special items to display, how can you get the most impact from them? Framing them is a great way to emphasize these pieces, while protecting them at the same time. The design options with custom framing are virtually endless.

Depending on your personal tastes, you can have the items framed in a coordinated fashion for a matching, streamlined collection. Or if your style is more eclectic, we can create a grouping with differing frame styles.

A grouping can work well in many places in your home or office. Whether you have a large wall you'd like to fill, or a smaller area that you'd like to cozy up with several related pieces, we can help you to create just what you're looking for. Hallways and stairwells are also great places to hang groupings; these transitional areas can be used to connect larger, adjacent areas. A collection of framed artwork and photos will do wonders to personalize these spaces.

Come and visit us at one of our two locations; Montgomery Center just a half-mile north of the Princeton Airport on Rt. 206 (609-683-7778), or in Southfield Commons located in West Windsor (609-799-5522) to experience custom framing at its best! Medical Center Shows Watercolor Paintings

An exhibition of watercolor paintings by Sandra Nusblatt is currently on display at the University Medical Center at Princeton. The collection will be on view through November 16.

Ms. Nusblatt attended the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia and is a member of the Garden State Watercolor Society. She specializes in paintings of residences, historic buildings, landscapes, and flowers.

Ms. Nusblatt has executed commissions of Drumthwacket, the official residence of the governor of New Jersey, and Morven, the prior residence, both in Princeton. Her paintings hang in private and corporate collections and have been displayed in galleries and shows in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

"Painting is more than getting the color right. It is about making an emotional connection. I never have trouble finding inspiration to paint. I paint as I breathe. It's my life," she said.

The exhibit is being sponsored by the Auxiliary of the University Medical Center at Princeton. Proceeds from the show will benefit the establishment of a new community Breast Health Center.

For purchase information, call Barbara Allen in the Auxiliary office, at (609) 497-4069.

Artists Celebrate Nudity In Gallery 31 North Show

Eighteen artists from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and North Carolina explore the human nude using paintings, drawings, photography, art books, prints, and sculpture in the Gallery 31 North show, "2d-3d nude." This show is unique as it has three sets of married couples exhibiting their work.

"The idea of being nude conjures up mixed emotions. Some of us hide the imposition, while others flaunt it. Since the earliest cave paintings it has been a feeding ground for creative artists and its inspiration will outlive us all," said Wally Barnette, the gallery's curator and co-owner.

It is with this thought that Gallery 31 North brings together the largest number of artists to show in a single exhibition, "2d – 3d nude," on view through October 30.

The nude even before recorded history has been approached artistically in a multitude of ways and the assembled group of artists for this show is no exception. There is such a variety of media, size and presentation that the visitors to the gallery will have much to contemplate and absorb, said Ms. Barnette.

The artists in the exhibition use six different media: painting, drawing, photography, sculpture, mono print, and art book. Two of the couples are exhibiting independently and one with a collaborative piece.

The two dimensional aspect of the presentation begins with oil paintings by Christina Craig of Upper Black Eddy, and John and Dorothy Meggitt of New Hope. Large scale drawings on paper have been executed by Stephen McKenzie of Annandale and Linda Ganus of Clinton. Brian Bednarek of Woodbridge uses colored pencils on paper, and Donald Rhoads of Charlotte, N.C. also prefers drawing on paper but incorporates some mixed media. Representing the print medium is Will Hubscher of Stewartsville, and Berendina Buist of High Bridge is a photography artist, curator, and a consultant of the medium for Gallery 31 North.

Sculpture and art books encompass the three dimensional portion of the "2d – 3d nude" show. Joseph Baraz from New York City returns to the gallery after his painted stone sculpture show in 2003, with a painted woodcarving. Ron Kalinoski from Syracuse, N.Y. executed a body casting in bronze that began its creation at Gallery 31 North.

Chuck Kumnick of Upper Black Eddy, Pa., uses mixed media, including bone for one of his figures. Cast paper helps to give the body sculptures of Susan Grabel from Staten Island, N.Y. a light and airy feel. Simon Rybansky of Stewartsville chooses classical marble to convey his contemporary sculpture. Virginia Abbot and Izzy LaDuca of Easton, Pa. will have a collaborative wall relief.

Books comprise the last medium of the exhibition and two artists have been selected. Claire Simon of Maplewood has compiled a selection of figure drawings and bound them into several books entitled Vitae. Maryanne Riker brings her expertise as an art bookmaker to the show with two books, one enticingly titled Belly Button.

Gallery 31 North is located on the ground floor of the Historic Hunt House on the corner of Rt. 31 and Hunt Place, Glen Gardner, approximately four miles north of Clinton. Gallery hours are Thursday through Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m., or by appointment. For more information, call (908) 537 7044, email gallery31 north@comcast.net, or visit www.gallery31north.com.

"Beauty of the Seasons" On Display in Lambertville

The Coryell Gallery in Lambertville is presenting two artists, Mike Filipiak and Charles R. Ross, in its annual fall exhibition of "The Beauty of the Seasons," on view October 2 through November 13. The public is invited to meet the artists in a reception on Sunday, from 3 to 6 p.m.

Mr. Filipiak, a pastel artist who resides in Flemington, graduated from Waynesburg College in Pennsylvania, with a double major in fine arts and history. After college he went to Kennebunkport, Maine, to study and work with marine artist Frank Handlen.

Following his teaching, Mr. Filipiak has been pursuing that same subject matter, inspired by the expanse of sky, open fields, the rivers, and canals in our area. His great interest is in the effects of light through the trees at sunset. He continues to visit the ocean along the coast of Maine, where he captures the excitement of the water crashing on the rocks.

Mr. Filipiak has exhibited in numerous shows in the area, winning awards such as the Patrons Award for Pastel at Phillips Mill in 2003, an award for works on paper at the Artsbridge exhibit in 2005, and awards in the Lambertville Historical Society's juried shows in the Coryell Gallery. He has exhibited at the Atelier Gallery in Frenchtown, the Mast Cove Gallery in Kennebunkport, Maine, and is represented by the Robin Hutchins Gallery in Maplewood.

Mr. Ross, a native of Philadelphia, had his formal art training at the Fleisher Art Memorial and the Philadelphia Museum College of Art. Following college he continued studying with renowned watercolorist and teacher Emerton Heitland, who instilled in him a great love of watercolor.

"I have always been inspired by nature and its moods, so it has played an important role in my painting," said the artist. "The bleakness of winter, as well as the colors of autumn, and the sight of the sea, have continuously inspired me. Since early in my career I have been drawn to the Delaware River Valley, which represents the majority of my work."

As an active member of the Philadelphia Watercolor Club, he served on its board of directors for many years. He has had two one-man shows at the Philadelphia Art Alliance, as well as at the Chadds Ford Gallery and LaSalle College. Mr. Ross has exhibited in many juried shows, winning awards from the National Academy of Design, Allied Artists of America, American Watercolor Society, Hudson Valley Art Association, Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, and Phillips Mill.

The Coryell Gallery is located at the Porkyard, 8 Coryell Street, Lambertville, along the Delaware and Raritan Canal. Gallery hours are Wednesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. For more information, call (609) 397-0804.

Proceeds from the benefit support the museum's children's education, exhibition, and community outreach programs.

The annual Cornerstone Awards, honoring both an individual and an organization whose commitment has made a significant impact on the arts throughout the region will be presented to Robert B. Haines and the Rutgers Center for Innovative Print & Paper. In addition, Councilwoman Janice Kovach will be recognized for her role in obtaining a grant from the Department of Environmental Protection to stabilize the Clinton Mills Dam and Dike.

Music will be performed by the Brazilian band Zazueira. A silent auction and a raffle of an original work of art by Toshiko Takaezu will also take place. Two exhibitions of contemporary art will be in the galleries: an exhibition of artist books, "The Elements: Creative Energy," and "Portraits of Amelia: Photographs by Robin Schwartz."

In conjunction with its annual "Art Party" fund-raiser, the museum will be offering as a raffle prize an original ceramic form by internationally known artist Toshiko Takaezu. The work is valued at $1,250.

Ms. Takaezu is famous for her innovative, fully-closed forms which redefined ceramics. She has been working with this method for more than 45 years, varying her work in height from five inches to five feet. In 1987, she was named a Living Treasure in her native Hawaii and received the Gold Medal Award from the American Craft Council in 1994. Her work is included in the permanent collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Smithsonian Institution, and the National Museum in Bangkok, Thailand. Ms. Takaezu lives in and maintains a studio in Quakertown.

"Dream, Africa" Exhibit At MCCC ARTWORKS

"Dream, Africa," a multimedia exhibition, is currently being shown at Mercer County Community College's ARTWORKS Gallery in Trenton through Saturday, October 15.

The exhibit features paintings by Nancie Gunkelman, photographs by Diane Levell, and sculpture by J.C. Sarpong. A reception for the artists will be held on Friday, October 14, from 6 to 8 p.m., coinciding with Trenton's "Second Friday" events. A gallery talk will take place on Tuesday, October 4, at 7 p.m.

"Those of us who have not been lucky enough to visit the vast and wondrous continent of Africa, and to experience first-hand the rich, varied cultures and daily traditions of its people, find ourselves depending on a patchwork of images, illusions, and impressions from books, television, and the news," said Tricia Fagan, MCCC's Gallery curator. "In this show, we are very pleased to offer three unique perspectives on Africa by three artists who have either come from Africa or who have spent significant time on the continent."

Nancie Gunkelman, a resident of Monroe Township, holds degrees in both fine arts and zoology. Throughout the 1970s and 1980s she spent more than half her time living, working, and traveling in African countries, including Kenya, Nigeria, and Sao Tome and Principe.

"Inspired by this experience I have tried to capture in my oil paintings everyday life in the developing world," she said.

Ms. Gunkelman, who studies with Steve Kennedy at ARTWORKS, is also Commissioner of Monroe Township's Cultural Arts Commission.

Photographer and artist Diane Levell of Doylestown, Pa., spent the years between 1981 and 1996 living in Germany and Turkey, and traveling extensively throughout both Europe and northern Africa. Using a 4" x 5" view camera, Ms. Levell sought to capture the people and their customary practices in countries that include Morocco and Algiers.

"I use a variety of historic photo processes when developing my work because it seems to enhance and honor the feel of tradition that colors so much of daily life in these places," she said.

J.C. Sarpong was born in the West African country of Ghana where he received a B.A. in sculpture from the University of Science and Technology. After working for Ghana's National Center for Arts and Culture for a few years, he traveled to the U.S. on a grant to study bronze casting and fabrication techniques at the Johnson Atelier in Hamilton. He was a member of the ARTWORKS faculty in the early nineties, and continues to create bronze sculptures at his home studio in Trenton.

"My work pursues themes common in the traditional religions, such as music, chieftaincy, occupations, and daily rituals of both the people of Ghana and Africa as a whole," he said.

His figurative bronze statues incorporate symbolic and conceptual imagery along with the human image.

The ARTWORKS building is located on Stockton Street between Market and Front Streets in Trenton, directly across the street from the New Jersey Department of Motor Vehicles building, just off Route 1 South. Gallery hours are Tuesday, 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., and 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Wednesday, 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.; and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information, call ARTWORKS at (609) 394-9436 between 9:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Tuesdays or Wednesdays.

"COMMITMENT": This bronze sculpture, created by West-African born sculptor J.C. Sarpong, is currently on exhibit at Mercer County Community College's ARTWORKS Gallery in Trenton. Fire Wire

The Princeton Fire Department has responded to more than 10 calls since September 19. Fire and carbon monoxide alarms were set off from careless cooking, renovation work from construction companies, and malfunctioning systems from residences and businesses on Edgerstoune Road, Magnolia Lane, Caldwell Drive, and Prospect Avenue.

On the morning of September 19, crews responded to Elm Drive on the Princeton University campus for a report of a natural gas leak. The gas had been turned off by University maintenance prior to arrival of responding units and there was no further hazard.

Another gas leak occurred on September 23, at a Madison Street residence that forced the evacuation of the occupants who were assisted on scene by the First Aid Squad. PSE&G crews repaired the leak.

Crews from all three companies responded to a vehicle fire on Quaker Road on September 24. The fire, which had spread to brush at the side of the road, was quickly contained though the vehicle was a complete loss. No one was injured.

Fire Safety Facts

Once you have made your way out of a burning building you may already be suffering the effects from a lack of oxygen.

One of the major effects is the impairment of judgement. While some may not realize it, the possible exposure to a lack of oxygen can impair a person's ability to think clearly and rationally. It is important to not re-enter a building during a fire and individuals should try to prevent others from re-entering.

Another hazard which exists in a burning building is the presence of toxic gases. Carbon monoxide is a main by-product of fire. It is odorless, colorless, and tasteless. In high concentration it can immediately cause unconsciousness and subsequent death. Even in moderate amounts carbon monoxide can cause impairment of mental functions that are similar to a lack of oxygen.

During a fire, go to a safe place (preferably prearranged) far enough away from the building in case of collapse or explosion, and perform a head count of those who were in the building with you.

Rescue Report

The Princeton First Aid and Rescue Squad responded to the following calls from September 17 through September 23:

On Thursday morning, September 22, the Squad responded for an 82-year-old woman who was unable to walk. The woman, who had had two prior knee replacements, felt her knees lock up while bending over to tie her shoes. The Squad assisted her to the stretcher and transported her to the hospital for further evaluation.

Also on Thursday, while the duty crew was on an assignment, a second crew responded to aid an Italian-speaking, elderly male. Fortunately, one of the crew members spoke fluent Italian and was able to communicate with the man, whose only complaint was a stomach ache. Despite the seemingly benign complaint, a rapid assessment by the crew discovered signs of a cardiac problem and they rapidly transported the man to the hospital where he was admitted to a telemetry unit for congestive heart failure.

Later that afternoon, the Squad responded to State Road for a 26-year-old man who fell off his bicycle and injured the left side of his chest. The incident occurred in Montgomery, and the patient had tried to ride his bicycle to the hospital, but found the pain too intense to continue. EMTs found swelling, tenderness, and bruising to the left ribs and flank and secured him to a spinal immobilization board for splinting. The crew administered oxygen before transporting the patient to the hospital.

The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad is a volunteer-run organization dedicated to providing emergency medical and technical rescue services to the Princeton community. The Squad relies on donations of manpower, money, and services to fulfill its mission. For more information on assisting the Squad, visit www.pfars.org, or call (609) 924-3338.

Mom is in Good Hands at Stonebridge at Montgomery's Assisted Living Center

SKILLMAN, NJ – For Skillman resident Kathy Santye, the term "sandwich generation" was beginning to feel all too appropriate. Caught between the needs of her three teenage children and an aging mother who lived alone, Mrs. Santye was torn between competing obligations.

Her mother, Helen Curry, lived alone in Pennington. She could no longer drive or prepare meals, and personal care was becoming more difficult.

At the same time, Mrs. Santye's children had their own whirlwind lives, needing to be driven to and from sports games and practices, friends' homes, school commitments and more.

"I was really beginning to feel overwhelmed," Mrs. Santye said. "I was torn between two worlds."

For Mrs. Santye and her mother, Stonebridge at Montgomery's assisted living center presented the ideal solution. Since becoming a resident in January, Mrs. Curry has found renewed vitality in a sociable, activity-filled lifestyle with friends, family and staff members always close at hand.

"She is always playing games, cards, scrabble; she goes to the ecumenical church services and she loves to get books from the Stonebridge library," Mrs. Santye said. Recent on-site entertainment highlights included performances by Irish step dancers and by the Princeton's own American Boychoir.

At the Stonebridge assisted living center, Mrs. Curry and other residents maintain the privacy and independence of their own senior-friendly apartments while benefiting from a range of services and amenities that make life easier. These include three meals daily, weekly housekeeping, dressing, bathing, and medication reminders.

Helen Curry and Kathy Santye

And while the Stonebridge assisted living center offers its own complete menu of amenities and activities, residents are also free to enjoy all the benefits of the Stonebridge campus, such as the pool and fitness center, on-site bank, meditation room, putting green, physician-staffed health care clinic and outdoor walking trails.

Mrs. Santye, meanwhile, has been enjoying her newfound peace of mind. "I know my mother is eating well, she's safe, she's happy. She loves it at Stonebridge. It has changed my life and it has changed her life."

Stonebridge at Montgomery offers independent living, assisted living and skilled nursing care.

Michael Mostoller

Michael Mostoller Named Master Teacher at NJIT

Princeton architect and Princeton Regional Board of Education member Michael Mostoller was recently appointed a Master Teacher at the New Jersey Institute of Technology.

A Borough resident, Mr. Mostoller is a professor at NJIT's School of Architecture, as well as past director of the undergraduate program. He teaches classes on history, housing, and design, and he won a University Excellence Teaching Award in 1993 and 1999, an award which is based on performance ratings on student evaluations. In 1995 he was named Distinguished Professor of Architecture at NJIT.

Master Teachers are chosen because they have demonstrated the highest level of teaching excellence. The honor is carried with the person throughout the remainder of his or her career at NJIT.

Mr. Mostoller, who will be honored in a University Convocation ceremony at NJIT on Wednesday, will begin his position by serving a three-year term on the Master Teacher Committee. This will be an opportunity for him to play a leadership role in fostering creation of a learning environment among students and faculty on NJIT's campus.

Members of the Master Teacher Committee provide institutional leadership and guidance to inspire and motivate in the classroom. In the past, committee members have served as teaching mentors for new faculty and teaching assistants. They have organized and taken part in seminars, colloquia, and workshops, and have obtained grants to promote effective college teaching and learning.

Following Mr. Mostoller's first three years on the committee, he will take part in the strategic planning for improvement of the teaching and learning environment on campus, and play a leadership role in the creation of a university resource center for teaching and learning at NJIT.

Mr. Mostoller is a graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and holds a graduate degree from Harvard University. He has taught at Rensselaer, Harvard's Graduate School of Design, the Yale Architectural School, and Columbia University. In May 1994 he was invested into the College of Fellows of the AIA for his work in education, scholarship, research, and practice.

His firm, Michael Mostoller Architecture, has had extensive experience in renovation and new construction, with work that includes public housing, apartments for senior citizens, community buildings, affordable housing, private residences, and most recently, the expansion of the Lawrence Apartment complex at Princeton University.

The firm's work has received national recognition and awards, including both a New Jersey and New York City AIA Design Award.

Mr. Mostoller is a four-year member of the Princeton Regional Board of Education, and currently serves as vice president, as well as chair of the facilities committee. He is also a member of Princeton Future, and has served as the planning and design task force leader for the last five years. Much of his recent work on the task force has involved the planning and development of the Witherspoon Street corridor.

Area Students Announced As 2005 Byrd Scholars

The Department of Education recently announced that 250 New Jersey students were selected to be 2005 Robert C. Byrd Scholarship winners.

The federal scholarship program is administered by the New Jersey Department of Education. Scholarships are awarded to the most academically talented members of high school graduating classes, and the students compete against other applicants within each of New Jersey's 13 congressional districts.

Area winners include Michael Zuckerman of Princeton, who attends The Lawrenceville School; Vivek Viswanathan of Lawrenceville, who attends Lawrence High School; Andrew Delman of Princeton Junction, who attends West Windsor-Plainsboro High School; and Yifei Chen of Plainsboro, who attends West Windsor-Plainsboro High School.

Scholarship winners receive $1,500 a year, contingent on federal funding, for up to four years of study at any accredited college or university in the United States. Students who maintain full-time status and exhibit satisfactory academic progress are entitled to renew the scholarship each year.

More than 1,500 applications were received. The winners were selected based on their college entrance examination scores, class rankings, grade point averages, and other factors, including academic honors and responses to an essay question. Applicants must be legal New Jersey residents and be nominated by their schools.

"I want to congratulate the winners as examples of stellar student achievement in New Jersey public schools," said Acting Governor Richard J. Codey. "I am sure that all will do well in their college careers and make our state even more proud."

For more information about the Robert C. Byrd Honors Scholarship Program, or New Jersey's 2005 scholarship recipients, contact Sue Sliker, program administrator, at (609) 777-0800.

Police Blotter

On September 22, a Potters Run resident told Township Police that jewelry having an aggregate value of more than $37,000 had been stolen from her home. She reported that the jewelry, which had been kept in a pouch on her kitchen counter, had last been seen on August 26, and that she had been searching for it unsuccessfully ever since. She speculated that the theft may have occurred between August 13 and August 26, during which time she claimed to have had many workers in the home.

Reported missing were a two carat diamond engagement ring valued at $20,000, a platinum wedding band with channel set diamonds valued at $5,000, a gold ring with two sapphires and three diamonds valued at $2,000, pearl earrings with a diamond on each valued at $5,000, and a pair of heart-shaped earrings with diamonds valued at $5,000.

Police reported that there had been no forced entry to the home. The theft continues to be investigated by Ptl. Christopher King of the Township Detective Bureau.

An unidentified driver escaped injury when his car caught on fire on September 24 on Quaker Road, just south of Mercer Road, at approximately 11 a.m. The driver told Township Police that he was traveling southbound on Quaker Road when he smelled the odor of smoke emanating from the engine of his car, a 2000 Chrysler Sebring two-door convertible. After exiting the vehicle he called the police, then watched while the car became engulfed in flames. The fire generated numerous 9-1-1 calls, resulting in a prompt response by members of the Princeton Fire Department and Princeton First Aid and Rescue Squad, as well as Township Police. The accident led police to close the road for approximately one hour, until 12:05 p.m.

An unidentified 17-year-old male from Caroga Lake, N.Y. was arrested on September 19 on Witherspoon Street for driving a vehicle that had been reported stolen in upstate New York. His passenger, Jennifer Bouck, 20, of Schoharie, N.Y. was also arrested when a search of the vehicle revealed both to be in possession of marijuana. The juvenile was charged with possession of a controlled dangerous substance and with receiving stolen property, then committed to the Mercer County Youth Detention Center. Ms. Bouck was also charged with possession, and issued a summons to appear in Borough Municipal Court on September 26.

A Princeton University student, Victor Noskov of Toronto, was arrested on September 13 on charges of shoplifting at the Wawa store on University Place. The alleged theft was reported by a store employee, who claimed that the student had attempted to leave the store without paying for food items. The accused man was released after being assigned a September 19 court date.

Three men were arrested by Borough Police on charges of driving while intoxicated — Richard Thomas Fisher, 22, of Dogwood Hill on September 16; Alexander Bruno, 35, of Somerset, on September 17; and Noe Alberto Garcia, 29, of Lawrenceville, on September 19. All three were assigned September 26 court dates.

Coming to McCarter: "Gem of the Ocean," Featuring TV Stars

McCarter Theatre has announced that Phylicia Rashad and John Amos will head the cast of August Wilson's Gem of the Ocean, arriving October 11 for a three-week run.

The production will mark the directorial debut of Tony Award winner Ruben Santiago-Hudson, and will also feature cast members Russell Horsby, Chuck Patterson, Roslyn Rufl, Raynor Scheine, and Keith Randolph Smith.

Phylicia Rashad

John Amos

Praised by the New York Times as "a touchstone for everything else August Wilson has written," Gem of the Ocean delves into the magical voyage of Citizen Barlow, a man seeking a new life at the bustling home of 287-year-old Aunt Ester. The spiritual matriarch of a tight-knit group of local characters, Ester sets Mr. Barlow off on a journey that illuminates what it really means to be free. The ninth in a ten-play cycle by Mr. Wilson tracing the African-American experience in 20th Century America, Gem of the Ocean represents the first chapter chronologically.

A Tony Award winner for A Raisin in the Sun on Broadway, Ms. Rashad will reprise the role of Aunt Ester at McCarter – the role she originated and for which she was nominated for a Tony Award in the play's Broadway premiere.

"I never imagined from the audience that I'd see Aunt Ester, let alone be Aunt Ester," said Ms. Rashad in an interview with NPR last year. "To play this character at this particular time in my life and my career is an honor. I feel that I have been entrusted with someone very dear and precious, because Mr. Wilson's characters are very dear and precious to him."

Best known for her television roles as Clair Huxtable on The Cosby Show and as Ruth Lucas on Cosby, Ms. Rashad won the Tony Award for best actress in a play for the 2004 Broadway production of A Raisin in the Sun. She made her debut as an executive producer, co-producing and co-starring with her sister, Debbie Allen, in The Old Settler on PBS. The recipient of two NAACP Image Awards as Best Actress in a Comedy Series for her work in both Cosby series, she has also earned two People's Choice Awards and two Emmy nominations.

Mr. Amos appeared on Broadway in August Wilson's Pulitzer Prize-winning play Fences. His other stage credits include The Boys Next Door, The Life and Death of a Buffalo Soldier, and his acclaimed one-man show, Halley's Comet. He is perhaps best known for his work as a television and film actor, most notably his portrayal of the adult Kunta Kinte in Roots, which earned him an Emmy nomination. His numerous television credits include the roles of Weatherman Gordy on The Mary Tyler Moore Show, James Evans in the sitcom Good Times, and his recurring role as Admiral Percy Fitzwallace, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, on The West Wing.

Dark Humor and Unspeakable Secrets of Family Life Emerge In Sam Shepard's "Buried Child," Season-Opener at Intime

Shelly: It's like a Norman Rockwell cover or something.
Vince: Whot's o' motter with that? It's American.

Vince and his girlfriend Shelly, as they approach the front door of Vince's family home, are about to entangle themselves in one of the darkest visions of American family life ever presented on stage. What might at first glance resemble a happy, idealized Norman Rockwell magazine cover quickly turns into a grim, unsettling portrayal of mental instability, bitter resentments, violence, and death.

Sam Shepard's Pulitzer Prize-winning Buried Child (1978), playing at Theatre Intime on the Princeton University campus for one more weekend, is rich in sardonic humor and timeless in its vivid images of the ravages of family life. It stands alongside Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman (1948) and Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night (1956) in the category of American masterpieces that uncompromisingly and compellingly reveal truths about ourselves, our closest human relationships and the dysfunctionalities of our society. Buried Child is more unconventional, more surprising and, in its gothic idiosyncrasies, perhaps the most disturbing of the three plays.

A young Theatre Intime undergraduate company, in its 2005-06 season opener under the direction of Princeton University sophomore Douglas Lavanture, delivers some dynamic, illuminating character portrayals and vivid, memorable moments of comedy and drama. Unfortunately, however, the depths of the darkness and evil, and the requisite credibility and realism underpinning the extravagant surrealism of Buried Child are often absent in this production. There are significant gaps here, in age and in life experience, between these actors and some of the characters they portray.

FAMILY BUSINESS: Tilden (Damian Carrieri, right) shucks corn while his sick father Dodge (Paulo Quiros) sleeps, and both must ultimately confront secrets from their past in "Buried Child."

Set in an old family farmhouse in southern Illinois, Buried Child explores questions of individual identity and one's role within a family. There is mystery in the past lives of these characters, and, indeed, an actual child buried — in the back yard. The forward motion of the plot gradually exhumes the buried secrets of that family history.

Constantly bickering, the dying patriarch Dodge (Paulo Quiros) and his garrulous wife Halie (Elizabeth Abernethy) live out their barren lives, mostly on separate floors of this farmhouse. Halie delivers much of her dialogue from offstage upstairs. Their son Tilden (Damian Carrieri) — approaching middle age, mentally unbalanced, diffident — inexplicably brings in armloads of fresh corn and carrots from the supposedly barren back field. The second son Bradley (Thomas Dollar), maimed in a chainsaw accident and walking with a removable wooden leg, is an angry bully, potentially brutal to family and others.

It is this bizarre family scene that Vince (Jeff Brown) and his girlfriend Shelly (Alex Ripp) encounter. Vince, the son of Tilden, has not been home for six years. Dodge does not recognize his grandson, nor does Tilden recognize his own son. Just as Vince and Shelly try to make connections, to assert and establish their identities in this hostile setting, the audience struggles to find meaning and order in these strange proceedings.

Vince first fights to gain acknowledgment and recognition from his father and grandfather: "How could they not recognize me? How in the hell could they not recognize me! I'm their son!" Then Shelly, after reaching out to connect, with Tilden and Dodge in particular, expresses her frustration with Halie's indifference: "Don't you wanna' know who I am! Don't you wanna know what I'm doing here! I'm not dead!"

Mr. Quiros' Dodge is a fiercely energetic character, frightened of his family and his past and fighting for his life. The 50-year stretch in age here and unrealistic make-up are problematic. Ms. Abernethy presents a colorful Halie, trying to preserve her own vision of the family's past and to escape its present. Again there is a large age gap here between actor and character, and Ms. Abernethy is most convincing in her long monologues delivered from offstage.

Mr. Carrieri's simple-minded, careworn Tilden is credible, caring, and threatening all at the same time; but Mr. Dollar's vicious Bradley lacks the menace and overpowering aura of malice that his part requires.

Mr. Brown and Ms. Ripp's characterizations are on firmer ground, more familiar territory. They are consistently in character and believable as the two twenty-year-olds, outsiders from the "real" world entering this scene of darkness and depravity. They provide, at least on first appearance, a certain welcomed normality, and Shelly attempts to establish communication, humanity, and understanding in this bereft family group. She also brings a certain air of sexual tension to the male-dominated household. Both these characters, all the way through to Shelly's escape and Vince's immersion in the family, are engaging and sympathetic.

Another outsider, Christian Burset's Father Dewis arrives in the second half of the play, involved in some sort of shady relationship with Halie. The least developed of Mr. Shepard's characters, he is a caricature of a well-intentioned, inept minister. He immediately realizes that he's in over his depth in this darkly enmeshed family circle and eagerly abdicates all responsibility. His rational Christianity is futile in the face of such decadence. "I'm just a guest here, Halie. I don't know what my position is exactly. This is outside my parish anyway."

Set design by Lauren Wang, Jeff Hill and Ms. Abernethy, representing the main room of the farmhouse with staircase ascending to the second floor, is functional, simple and efficient, but does need to be less minimalist, more realistic to help establish the credibility of this place and its inhabitants. Will Ellerbe's lighting design could also be more helpful in establishing the nuances of the mixed tone of this darkly comic drama.

As Vince asserts at the start, "It's American ... it's my heritage. What dya' expect?" He does indeed inherit his grandfather's house, and along with it the depravity, violence, inability to connect, and denial of the truth that all constitute the dark side of the American Dream and the legacy of the American family in this luminous drama, whose powerful universal themes transcend the lapses of this production and resonate just as richly now as they did a full generation ago.

University Inaugurating Cone Memorial Concerts

The Princeton University Department of Music has announced the inauguration of a series of annual concerts in memory of Prof. Edward T. Cone, the noted pianist, composer, author, and longtime faculty member who died a year ago. The first concert will take place on Tuesday, October 18 at 8 p.m. in Richardson Auditorium and feature The Brentano String Quartet in a program of works by Haydn, Shostakovich, and Debussy. The program will be open to the public without admission charge.

"We are proud to offer this new concert series to the University and the public," said Music Department Chair Scott Burnham. "Ed Cone loved going to concerts; in fact he made many of our concerts possible, both as a musician and as a benefactor."

Edward T. Cone

Born in Greensboro, N.C. in 1917, Prof. Cone studied composition at Princeton University with Roger Sessions, obtaining his B.A. in 1939 and his M.F.A. in 1942. He subsequently held a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship at Princeton, and joined the faculty in 1947, retiring in 1985. From 1979 until 1983 he also held the position of Andrew D. White Professor-at-Large at Cornell University. Among his awards were a Guggenheim Fellowship, an Old Dominion Fellowship at Princeton, and an ASCAP-Deems Taylor Award. He was awarded the Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa, from Princeton in June 2004.

In addition to his work as a composer, Prof. Cone was an influential analyst and critic. A frequent contributor to music journals, he was also the author of three books — Musical Form and Musical Performance (1968), The Composer's Voice (1974), and Music: A View from Delft (1989).

The Brentano String Quartet was appointed Quartet-in-Residence at Princeton University beginning in September, 1999. The residency includes free public performances; teaching and coaching chamber music in the Program in Musical Performance; working with undergraduate, graduate student, and faculty composers; and working with faculty members in conjunction with undergraduate courses. The Quartet's members are Mark Steinberg, violin; Serena Canin, violin; Misha Amory, viola; and Nina Maria Lee, violoncello.

The Quartet is named after Antonie Brentano, whom many scholars believe to have been Beethoven's mysterious "Immortal Beloved," and to whom he wrote his famous confession of love. The Quartet's awards include the first Cleveland Quartet Award, the 1995 Naumburg Chamber Music Award, and the Tenth Annual Martin E. Segal Award. For its first appearance in Great Britain at Wigmore Hall, it was awarded the Royal Philharmonic Society Music Award for the most outstanding chamber music début of 1997.

"It is extremely fitting that the inaugural concert feature the Brentano String Quartet," said Prof. Burnham. "They played beautifully at Mr. Cone's memorial service last fall, and The Edward T. Cone Foundation has been a primary contributor to the Ensemble-in-Residence Program at Princeton."

Tickets to the October 18 program may be obtained at the Richardson Auditorium box office on the evening of the performance.

Comedy Will Kick Off Passage Theatre Season

Passage Theatre's 20th Anniversary season will get underway on October 27 with a production of Move It ond It's Yours, a musical comedy about a man, his mid-life crisis, and his piano. Written by Trenton native David Finkle, Bill Weeden, and Sally Fay, the show will be directed by Jeff Cohen, founder of New York's Worth Street Theater. It will run from October 27 to November 20.

Move It ond It's Yours tells the story of Charlie Ross, a former songwriter about to get married for the third time. Before he can vacate his New York City apartment, he has to get rid of his prized baby grand piano. When told that the move will cost about $1,000, Charlie has a better idea. He has his fiancee post flyers around his neighborhood declaring "Move It and It's Yours," which immediately attract an array of unusual characters. In the process Charlie dusts off his piano skills and confronts the question: will he really be able to let his piano, and his lifelong dream, be hauled out the door?

Passage Theatre produced the show's world premiere in 1998, when it received the Best Musical New to New Jersey award from The Newark Star-Ledger.

In its efforts to make its programs accessible to people with disabilities, Passage Theatre offers large print programs and listening devices upon request at every performance. On Saturday, November 12 at 2 p.m., Move It and It's Yours will be presented with open captions for the hearing impaired.

Performances during the four-week run will be Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 p.m., Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m., and Sunday at 5 p.m.

Tickets are $25, with discounts available for students, seniors, and groups.

The Passage Theatre is located at Mill Hill Playhouse at the Intersection of Front and Montgomery Streets in Trenton.

Boychoir Concert to Open "Nassau at Six" Series

The American Boychoir will sing a Vesper Service on Sunday, October 9 at 6 p.m. at Nassau Presbyterian Church. The event, free of charge and open to the public, will kick off the 2005-06 Nassau at Six music series and inaugurate the year-long celebration by Nassau Presbyterian and the Witherspoon Street Presbyterian Church of 250 years of Presbyterian presence in Princeton.

"Speaking as both a choral director and the mother of a former member of The American Boychoir," said Nassau's Sue Ellen Page, "this is an extraordinary treasure we have in Princeton. The boys at this school make music of incredibly high caliber."

The Princeton-based American Boychoir is considered the nation's premier concert boys' choir. Its members — boys in grades five through eight — come from around the country to pursue a rigorous academic and musical curriculum at The American Boychoir School, the only non-sectarian boys' choir school in the country.

Nassau at Six programs begin at 6 p.m. with a free recital in the sanctuary, followed by a dinner costing $5 per person. To reserve dinner or child care, call the church office at (609) 924-0103 by noon on Wednesday, October 5.

Nassau at Six will continue on Sunday, November 20 with a performance by harpist Elaine Christy at Witherspoon Street Presbyterian Church.

Nassau Presbyterian Church is located at 61 Nassau Street.

Country Star Vince Gill To Sing at State Theatre

The "ambassador of country music," Vince Gill, who has won more Country Music Awards than anyone else in history, will appear for one night only at the State Theatre in New Brunswick on Tuesday, October 18 at 8 p.m. The opening act will be the country singer and songwriter Jon Randall. Tickets range from $35 to $60.

In the process of racking up $22 million in album sales, Mr. Gill has won 16 Grammy awards and 18 CMA honors, including Entertainer of the Year twice and Song of the Year four times. His latest album, Next Big Thing, includes the barrelhouse rock and roll of his tongue-in-cheek first single, Next Big Thing, a playful self-critique at the thirst for pop stardom. Other songs include This Old Guitar And Me, the Beatles-like harmonies of Don't Let Her Get Away, the square-dance Cajun reel of Old Time Fiddle, and Mexicali guitars on We Had It All. The album reflects many of Mr. Gill's influences, from country to bluegrass, pop to R&B, and folk to flamenco. Among the vocalists who guest on the album are Mr. Gill's wife Amy Grant, Emmylou Harris, Lee Ann Womack, and Leslie Satcher.

Born in Norman, Okla. in 1957, Mr. Gill turned professional after high school, working with such acts as the Bluegrass Alliance, Boone Creek, Sundance, and Pure Prairie League. For a time, he also toured with Rodney Crowell's band, the Cherry Bombs. In 1983, he signed with RCA Records, where he scored his first solo country hits, Oklahoma Borderline and Cinderella. In 1991, he was inducted into the Grand Ole Opry and remains one of the show's most active members.

For tickets, call the State Theatre box office at (732) 246-7469.

Munich Symphony Opening Series at State Theatre

New Brunswick's State Theatre will celebrate the opening of its 2005-06 classical symphony series on Saturday, October 15 at 8 p.m. with the U.S. debut tour of the Munich Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of conductor and piano soloist Philippe Entremont. Tickets range from $30 to $65, with group, student, and senior discounts available.

The program will include Weber's Overture to Oberon, Mozart's Piono Concerto No. 21, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

The Munich Symphony, embarking on its transcontinental tour of 26 cities, is one of Munich's four symphony orchestras. It developed in 1990 out of the former Graunke Symphony Orchestra, founded by Kurt Graunke in 1945. For more than half a century, the orchestra has presented a concert series featuring symphonic concert pieces, operas and operettas, ballets, and oratorios. Artists who have performed with the Symphony have included Renée Fleming, Juan Diego Flórez, Lucia Aliberti, Hildegard Behrens, José Carreras, Plácido Domingo, Simon Estes, Dame Gwyneth Jones, Vesselin Kasakova, Waltraud Meier, and Dame Margaret Price.

Mr. Entremont is an internationally recognized artist who divides his career between conducting and solo performances. He attracted international attention at age 18 when he played Jolivet's piano concerto and Liszt's Piono Concerto No. 1 to acclaim in Carnegie Hall. One of the most recorded artists of all time, he has directed countless symphony orchestras of Europe, Asia, and America. In 2004-05, he celebrated his 70th birthday with an appointment as Principal Guest Conductor of the Munich Symphony Orchestra. In 2006, in connection with the Mozart Year, he will be the conductor in charge of the Super World Orchestra based in Tokyo. An officer of the French Legion of Honor, he was recently awarded the title of Commander of the Order of Arts and Letters, the highest decoration bestowed by the French government in the arts.

A limited number of special Classical Season Opening tickets are available. The ticket includes cocktails at the theater, dinner at Soho in New Brunswick, premium seating for the concert, and a dessert reception with the artists at the theater. Tickets begin at $200 per person. Underwriting opportunities are available. For additional information, call (732) 247-7200, ext. 512.

Jazz Pianist Fred Hersch In Concert at Institute

Songs With and Without Words, featuring jazz pianist and composer Fred Hersch, will be the title of the opening event in the Institute for Advanced Study's Recent Pasts 20/21 2005-06 concert season. The program will take place on Friday and Saturday, October 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. in Wolfensohn Hall on the Institute campus.

The program will feature the wordless compositions of the modern jazz pianist Thelonius Monk, the lyric compositions of Cole Porter, and some of Mr. Hersch's own recent compositions.

Immediately following the concert, Mr. Hersch will speak with Institute Artist-in-Residence Jon Magnussen on the improvisatory art and the connections between the jazz and classical musical traditions.

"More so than in any other age, composers of our time are able to access and assimilate an ever-broadening range of music from around the world — classical, popular, folk, and otherwise," said Mr. Magnussen. "Here in America, the largely improvisatory tradition of jazz is a significant part of our musical consciousness, and its impact on the art music tradition is considerable."

Considered to be among the foremost jazz pianists in the world today, Mr. Hersch is known for his ability to reinvent the standard jazz repertoire, investing classics with original insight and extraordinary technique while simultaneously creating his own body of work. The winner of a 2003 Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship for composition, he has also earned two Grammy nominations for best jazz instrumental performance.

Tickets are free but must be reserved in advance. For more information, call (609) 734-8228 or visit www.las.edu/air.

Divorce And Money — What To Do If You Did Not Handle The Family Finances

The financial details involved in the dissolution of a marriage can be very complicated and often overwhelming to persons making their way through the divorce process. To assist clients in becoming more educated about their family's financial history, attorneys often suggest the retention of a forensic accountant. A forensic accountant is often a CPA, usually designated as a "CFE" (certified fraud examiner) who has experience investigating the financial reporting and bookkeeping of a family and businesses. A forensic accountant examines financial data relative to assets, liabilities, businesses, and lifestyle spending to support or refute representations made by one or both spouses. The information generated by a forensic accountant may be used to develop reasonable bases upon which to propose terms of settlement, participate in mediation, or to support arguments presented to the judge deciding the case.

Even today, it is rare for both spouses to have an equal understanding of the family's cash-flow and spending habits; the accumulation of assets and liabilities; and the income, liquidity and market value of businesses owned and/or operated by one or both spouses. As insight into each of these areas is invaluable when determining issues related to support (i.e., alimony) and equitable distribution (i.e., the reasonable and fair division of marital assets), it is crucial that the financial information relied upon is the product of thorough research conducted by a highly trained professional. Discussed below are several distinct areas in which the detail-oriented perspective offered by a forensic accountant may assist a litigant in his/her case.

Lifestyle Analysis: In New Jersey, the lifestyle led during marriage provides a foundation upon which decisions related to the support of a spouse and children after divorce may be based. Children are not limited to the marital standard of living as are spouses for support purposes. A forensic accountant may be called upon to create a detailed picture of a family's financial lifestyle by investigating the flow of cash throughout the marriage. The accountant will be required to examine several years of relevant financial data, such as bank accounts, credit card and brokerage account statements. At the conclusion of the accountant's investigation, he/she should be able to identify how much money will be required on a monthly basis to sustain the marital lifestyle.

Business Valuation: In many cases, equitable distribution of property requires that parties take a close look at the business(es) owned by one or both spouses. To properly value a business, the expertise of a valuation accountant is often required. A valuation accountant will visit the business, interview the owner(s), examine the business' books, tax returns and other financial statements, and conduct research related to the unique characteristics associated with the business. He/she will render a report identifying the value of the spouse's share in the business, and the cash flow of the business both in the past and predicted for the future. In the event the matter is tried before a judge, the accountant may testify to these facts.

Hidden Assets: Often after a Complaint for Divorce is filed, the active and/or passive income which previously existed to support the family is mysteriously missing. (An example of active income is that generated by employment. An example of passive income includes that generated by the investment of funds not managed by one of the spouses.) By examining and comparing financial documents, a forensic accountant may be able to locate and identify assets which may have been transferred, dissolved or otherwise re-distributed by one spouse prior to and leading up to divorce.

CINEMA REVIEW — Flightplan

Jodie Foster Back in Familiar Role as Frazzled Mom

Three years ago, Jodie Foster delivered one of the most memorable performances of her career in the film Panic Room. She played a woman whose maternal instincts caused her to perform superhuman feats in order to save her diabetic daughter from three intruders who broke into their New York brownstone. Directed by David Fincher, with an attention to detail reminiscent of Alfred Hitchcock, that taut, psychological thriller made this critic's annual Ten Best List for 2002.

Ms. Foster now reprises that role in Flightplan, a variation on Panic Room's theme. However, instead of her character moving into a new home in Manhattan, in Flightplan, she is recently widowed and flying back to New York from Germany. The story takes place inside a commercial jet airliner cruising at 37,000 feet. However, Flightplan fails to measure up to Panic Room's cinematic experience.

Panic had a riveting plot, palpable tension and a satisfying payoff; this movie is ruined by a Swiss cheese storyline, an absence of urgency, and a disappointing resolution riddled with red herrings. Despite the fact that Flightplan fails to measure up, Ms. Foster is able to elevate the mediocre material she had to work with to an acceptable level.

The story opens with Kyle Pratt (Foster) in Berlin, making arrangements to accompany her husband's casket to the United States. An ominous soundtrack and shadowy figures hint that something sinister is in the air.

Kyle and her six year-old daughter Julia (Marlene Lawston), board the plane. Soon after take-off, the exhausted mother falls asleep, leaving Julia to occupy herself. When she awakens, her little girl is gone. Kyle's concern escalates when she doesn't find her after searching the aisles, seats, and bathrooms.

LOOK AT MY DRAWING MOMMY!: Julia (Marlene Lawston, left) draws a design in the condensation on the window which will later help convince her mother Kyle (Jodie Foster) that she isn't losing her mind, and that her daughter is somewhere on the plane. (Photo by Ron Batzdorf, SMSP. © Touchstone Pictures, all rights reserved.)

The mystery takes on an otherworldly cast when none of the crew or other passengers remembers ever even seeing Julie, whose name isn't even on the list of passengers. What looked like a straightforward mystery becomes complicated by the question of whether this is a figment of Kyle's imagination. Did Julia also perish in the accident which claimed the life of her father? Or is some diabolical scheme afoot to make her mom look like she's lost her mind?

Kyle is a jet propulsion engineer and knows the blueprint of the aircraft like the back of her hand. This enables her to search remote regions of the plane while eluding an air marshal (Peter Sarsgaard), who is intent on handcuffing and sedating Kyle. Despite a promising premise, Flightplan crash lands following a preposterous, almost comical, turn of events.

Good (★★). Rating: PG-13 for violence and tension. Running time: 93 minutes. Studio: Buena Vista Pictures.

Sports

Sparked by McCareins' Sensational Effort, Tiger Football Tops San Diego to Start 2-0

The University of San Diego football team came across the country to play Princeton last Saturday and dominated the Tigers statistically.

The Toreros had the ball for 38:50 and 83 offensive plays, piling up 415 yards of total offense. The Tigers, for their part, had the ball for 21:10 and 49 plays, accumulating just 226 yards.

But Princeton senior defensive back Jay McCareins touched the ball 11 times for less than two minutes and that proved to make all the difference as the Tigers edged San Diego 20-17 before 6,216 at Princeton Stadium to improve to 2-0.

Substituting for injured return man Greg Fields, McCareins returned four punts for 69 yards and three kickoffs for 47 yards.

On defense, though, All-Ivy League cornerback McCareins had his greatest impact, making three interceptions and returning them for 113 yards.

McCareins' last pick of the day may well go down as one of the pivotal plays of the year as he snared a Josh Johnson pass and raced 99 yards down the sideline to put Princeton ahead 20-10 with 1:14 remaining in the fourth quarter.

The 6'0, 195-pound McCareins had one more trick left in his bag as he cleanly fielded an onside kick to clinch the game after San Diego had scored a TD with 46 seconds left.

In reflecting on his last interception which tied a Princeton single-game record held by 13 others, McCareins said that he read the pass before it was delivered.

"I was ready for the corner route," said McCareins, who returned an interception 75 yards for a touchdown in Princeton's season-opening win over Lafayette.

"They ran that same play twice in a row. It seemed like he threw that toward the end zone. I got the ball and I was just hoping to get a lead block."

McCareins smiled when asked if he was surprised that San Diego kept challenging him. "I was thinking they would try to throw away from me because I had a touchdown against them last year and I had another last week," said McCareins who sat on a Cybex exercycle because he was too sore to stand up.

"But their guys practice everyday and they think they are the best players on the field. I appreciate the fact that they go against me to see if I have a weakness. Hopefully I can overcome that as the game goes on."

While McCareins' chiseled physique and speed reflect his physical gifts, he attributes his play to gaining a better grasp of the Tiger defense.

"In spring ball I sat out and got to really understand how our defense works," recalled McCareins, who was later named the Ivy league Defensive Player of the Week and the National 1-AA Co-Defensive Player of the Week for his heroics.

"A big part of defense is being in place and knowing the other team's offense. I know where the linebackers are going; I know where the coverages are going. I'm making sure I'm efficient in my movements, I'm not just bouncing around."

Princeton head coach Roger Hughes appreciated McCareins' efficiency on the field against San Diego. "I don't know if superlatives can explain it," said Hughes of the Naperville, Ill. native who is leading the nation with an average of 2.0 interceptions a game.

THREE'S A CHARM: Princeton University senior star Jay McCareins sprints into the end zone on a 99-yard touchdown return of an interception with 1:14 remaining in the fourth quarter to give Princeton the margin of victory in its 20-17 win over San Diego last Saturday. McCareins made three interceptions in the contest to tie the program's single-game record. He also returned four punts for 69 yards and three kickoffs for 47 yards as well as recovering a last-minute onside kick.

ROCKING ROBBY: Princeton sophomore running back Robby Toresco bulls for some of his team-high 53 yards rushing in Princeton's 20-17 win over visiting San Diego last Saturday. Princeton, now 2-0, begins its Ivy League campaign this Saturday when it hosts 2-0 Columbia.

"He did a multiple role. Greg Fields was out with a hamstring pull and Jay came in and there was no drop off in special teams play. Jay elevated his defensive back play a couple of times. He's just remarkable, fabulous, whatever you can put in front of it, maybe two or three words."

San Diego quarterback Johnson won't soon forget McCareins. "We haven't seen a cornerback like that," said Johnson, who threw for 310 yards and two touchdowns on the afternoon.

"I thought we had him beat a couple of times but he recovered. He played that last one perfectly. I thought he had gone with the post route but then he came up at the last minute to break on the ball."

Hughes was heartened by the way his team recovered collectively from some sloppy offensive play. "What I told the team afterward is that good teams find a way to win," said Hughes. "Our last two weeks we have found multiple ways to win. Obviously, this week our defense played outstanding. Offensively, we sputtered. We had some miscues that we didn't have the previous week."

The Tigers' spotty play on offense was evident at the quarterback position where Hughes rotated Jeff Terrell and Bill Foran. Neither QB distinguished himself as Terrell hit on 7-of-16 passes with two interceptions while Foran went 5-for-8 for just 62 yards.

Princeton built a 13-0 lead at the half but its inconsistency on offense and Johnson's passing turned the game into a nailbiter. The Toreros trailed by 13-10 and had the ball at the Princeton 13 when McCareins struck with his third interception.

While Hughes was disappointed with the offensive execution, he did like the feeling he got from his players on the sidelines. "The nice thing is that I can sense that the guys are expecting to make the play to win the game," maintained Hughes. "We're not just hoping that we are going to make it. The attitude and the culture of this team is that we are going to make the plays."

Princeton senior linebacker and co-captain Justin Stull attributes that resolve to a special chemistry that has developed with this year's team.

"We've been together so long, even the freshmen and sophomores," said Stull. "It's like a puzzle where all the pieces fit together. It's like we're brothers, I know that's a cliche but it really feels that way. The commitment is a lot stronger with this team than what I've seen in the past."

With Princeton opening its Ivy campaign by hosting 2-0 Columbia this Saturday, McCareins knows the Tigers have to rachet up their commitment one step further.

"The first week of the Ivy season is way different than the first two games," said McCareins. "In the Ivy League every game is a championship game. We're going to be fighting hard. One loss and it's hard to win the league. That's our goal."

If McCareins can keep up his brilliant play, the Tigers could find themselves in the title chase. —Bill Alden

Princeton Women's Soccer Falls to Yale; Needs to Sharpen Up to Stay in Ivy Race

Earlier in the day last Saturday, the Princeton University women's soccer team was all smiles as it soaked in the cheers at the celebration of 2004 Ivy League champion teams during halftime of the Princeton-San Diego football game.

When night fell over Lourie-Love Field hours later, the Tigers hit the pitch looking to take a vital first step toward its fifth Ivy title in six years as they faced 24th-ranked Yale.

In the early stages of the game, the Tigers buzzed all over the pitch as they controlled possession and outshot Yale 5-2. But Princeton's failure to cash in left the game knotted at 0-0 and gave a jolt of confidence to Yale, which came into the game riding a six-game winning streak.

In the second half, the speedy Bulldogs turned that energy into a 1-0 lead as Mimi McCauley banged in a feed from Jamie Ortega at the 53rd minute mark. Minutes later, a Tiger miscue in front of the goal doubled Yale's lead as they scored on an own goal.

Having not lost an Ivy game since falling to Penn in November 2003, the Tigers put extra players up front to rachet up the pressure on Yale.

Princeton apparently scored a goal as Meghan Farrell found the back of the net but the score was waved off on an offsides call.

With 18 minutes remaining, Princeton senior star Emily Behncke was not to be denied as she finished off one of her patented runs to the goal with a blast off a rebound that narrowed the margin to 2-1.

Despite generating several other opportunities, the Tigers were unable to force the game into overtime as the resilient Bulldogs held off Princeton for a 2-1 win.

As the Bulldogs hugged and screamed nearby in their post-game celebration, Princeton head coach Julie Shackford acknowledged that her club has a huge bull's eye on its back losing 10 seniors from the 2004 team that advanced to the NCAA semifinals.

"We had the ball a lot and I thought we had control of the game," said Shackford, whose club fell to 1-4-2 with the loss in its Ivy opener.

"Nobody, especially in the league, is going to make it easy for us. Our domination in the league and losing all those kids, I think it becomes a game of moments. They got the better of the moments tonight."

Yale, last year's Ivy runners up, came into the game primed to knock off the Tigers. "They were dangerous," said Shackford, whose club outshot Yale 14-9 on the evening.

"They had a lot of speed and a lot of energy. That second goal just kills you at this level. We've had a lot of great games with Yale over the years. They just got the better of this one."

With her non-stop motor never slowing, senior star Behncke repeatedly raced up the field and verbally implored her teammates to not let the Bulldogs get the better of the contest.

"She's always going to work," said Shackford referring to Behncke who has scored or assisted on all seven of Princeton's goals this season. "She's in a difficult spot; she's by herself up there. I think she and Diana [Matheson] are under a lot of pressure up there."

One of the underlying factors in Princeton's slow start is the fact that its offense is essentially a two-player show. "We don't have other people stepping up," said Shackford. "We're very young in a lot of ways and we're trying to figure out our dynamic. We have to bring a lot of players along."

In Shackford's view, the team is coming along. "I think in each game we've made progress in some areas," said Shackford, whose club was slated to host LaSalle on September 27 before playing at Dartmouth on October 2.

"We've got a lot of work to do. I think we get caught in transition because we're not alert enough. We don't have that third or fourth attacker on their third of the field and that makes it tough to counter."

Shackford is hoping that her team doesn't get caught in a transition in the Ivy standings that sees Princeton slide away from its accustomed perch at or near the top of the league.

"There are a lot of league games left," said Shackford, managing a smile. "I don't think anyone is going to go through undefeated like we did last season. I'm trying to keep them positive. They're close but when it doesn't translate into results, it's disappointing."

The Tigers will need to start getting the right results soon if they are to be involved in a parade of champions next fall.

Princeton Field Hockey Still Unbeaten in Ivies

The Princeton field hockey team produced its best weekend of the season so far as it made the best of two home games, blanking Columbia 3-0 on Friday and then coming back two days later to cruise past Albany 3-0.

In the win over Columbia, Nicole Ng had a goal and an assist while goalie Allison Nemeth made five saves in posting the shutout. In Sunday's victory, Paige Schmidt came up big as she scored a goal and added an assist.

The Tigers, now 4-4 overall and 3-0 in Ivy League play, host Cornell on September 30 and Villanova on October 2.

Princeton Men's Soccer Tops Adelphi in Overtime

A goal by senior star Darren Spicer gave the Princeton men's soccer team a 1-0 overtime win at Adelphi last Saturday.

Spicer, who has Princeton's last three goals, now has 23 in his stellar career, 10th all-time in program history. Tiger goalkeeper Bobby Guelich recorded two saves in earning the shutout.

The Tigers, now 3-3, host Rutgers on September 28 before opening their Ivy League campaign by playing at Dartmouth on October 2.

Tiger Men's Water Polo Takes 2nd in ECAC

Unable to overcome an early deficit, the Princeton University men's water polo team fell 10-6 to St. Francis last Sunday in the ECAC championship game at DeNunzio Pool.

The Tigers trailed 4-1 after the first quarter and 7-2 at halftime before making things tighter in the second half. Chris Kelsch and Mike McKenna each had two goals for Princeton which fell to 8-2 with the loss.

In upcoming action, the Tigers host Navy on October 1 before playing at Bucknell on October 2.

Tiger Women's Golf Takes Its Invitational

Led by junior star Sharla Cloutier, the Princeton women's golf team won the Princeton Invitational last weekend at the Springdale Golf Club.

Cloutier shot a tournament-low 69 on Sunday to clinch first place in the individual standings. Her round was highlighted by an ace on the 13th hole. She ended up with a one-over 145 for the weekend.

In the team standings, the Tigers topped Yale by a comfortable 20-stroke margin to win the 17-team event.

Harrington Ending Stellar Tenure at Stuart, Taking Passion to Princeton Track Program

Nestled in a wooded area near Great Road on the north side of Princeton, the Stuart Country Day School campus features a gleaming stone and glass academic center, a well-stocked library, a gym, and carefully manicured playing fields.

If one is looking for a running track somewhere on the leafy grounds of the Catholic girls' school, however, the search will be fruitless.

But if someone is trying to find one of the powers in state Prep B track and cross country, amazingly he or she will have come to the right place. While Stuart may not have a track, it has had the resourceful and inspirational Thomas Harrington coaching its track and cross country programs to championship performances.

Under Harrington's guidance, the Tartans have won four of the last seven Prep B titles in track and five of the last seven Prep B crowns in cross country.

This week, though, Stuart will be losing Harrington as he is moving across town to start a job as an assistant coach of the Princeton University women's track team where he will concentrate on sprints and hurdles.

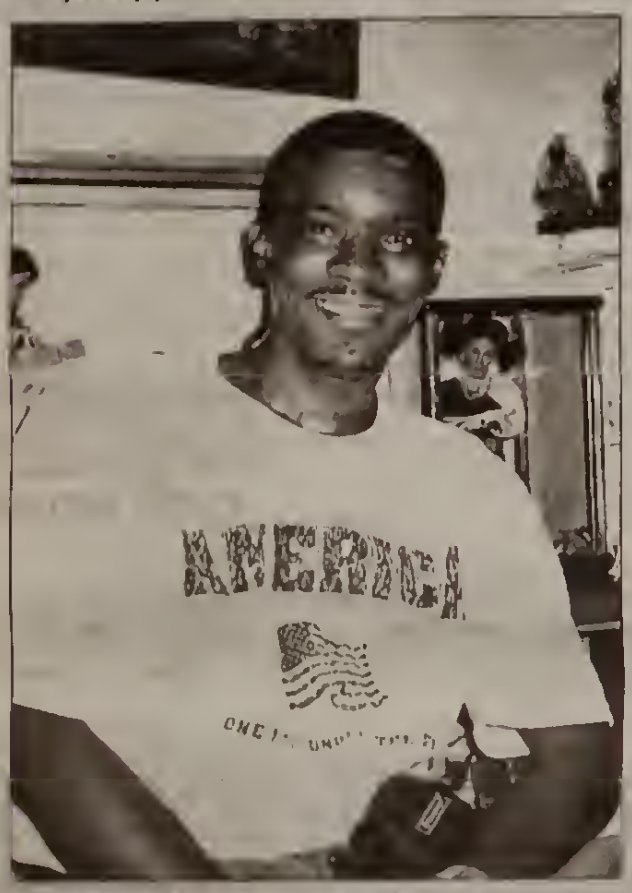
As Harrington moves up to the next level, he readily admits that his tenure at Stuart has made him uniquely qualified to handle just about any coaching challenge.

"Coaching at Stuart has made me a visionary, a motivator, and an innovator," said the loquacious Harrington, a former pre-law student speaking in a cadence reminiscent of the late trial lawyer Johnnie Cochran.

"Every single practice had to be creative. I had to teach kids how to long jump in a 10-foot hole. We taught the discus and the javelin in a 40-foot area in the gym. We could only have three hurdles in a row. The kids had to believe that the chaos would come together in the end."

It is those kids at Stuart that Harrington will miss the most as he starts his Princeton tenure. "The kids have been the backbone of what we have accomplished," asserted Harrington, whose daughters, Angela and Jenae, have been two of his standout athletes. "They have had to be so flexible and have total faith in what I have taught them."

CREATIVE THINKING: Thomas Harrington, far left, celebrates with his Stuart cross country team after it won the state Prep B title last November. Even though Stuart doesn't have a running track on campus, Harrington used his resourcefulness and passion to guide the Tartans to four of the last seven Prep B titles in track and five of the last seven Prep B crowns in cross country. This week, Harrington takes his creativity to Princeton University as he joins the women's track program as an assistant coach.



UPWARD MOBILITY: Thomas Harrington moved to the college ranks this week as he joined the Princeton University women's track program as an assistant coach after putting together a brilliant tenure heading the track and cross country programs at Stuart Country Day School.

For Harrington, a devout Christian, faith is a vital part of his approach. "I'm about faith," asserted Harrington. "No matter where I've been, I've relied on family prayer and I have made moves, it's God's will."

One move that changed the course of Harrington's life was competing for the Trenton Central High track program in the mid-1970s under legendary coach Al Jennings.

"My high school coach made such a great impression on me in terms of being a leader and turning kids into champions," said Harrington, a 1976 Trenton High graduate. "He never treated superstars differently from the rest of the athletes. It was always about the team. Everybody had a role and you never knew when someone was going to have to step up."

It took Harrington a while to step up athletically. At Trenton, he ran the 800 and wasn't a big scorer in a powerful program that won three Mercer County Championships and went undefeated in dual meets his last three years there.

Matriculating to Trenton State College, Harrington tried cross country but quit when he became injured adjusting to the 10 kilometer distance. After taking a hiatus from the sport, Harrington came out for indoor track and moved to the sprints where he became a standout performer.

"I was so frustrated about quitting as a freshman that I got mad at myself," recalled Harrington, who came to Trenton State planning to study a prelaw program but decided to switch to Physical Education. "I worked hard and came back to indoor track. I discovered that I had sprinter's speed in a distance runner's body. I didn't lose at the 100 meters for three years in dual meets."

After college, Harrington did student coaching at Ewing High and then came to Lawrence High as a junior varsity basketball coach. In 1986 he took over the Lawrence track program and became a thorn in the side of his mentor Jennings. Harrington led the Cardinals to a state Group II indoor title, a county outdoor title, and 10 Colonial Valley Conference crowns.

But with Stuart looking to start a track and cross country program, Harrington's coaching past caught up with him and he was eventually convinced to get back into the coaching arena with the Tartans.

"The idea of coaching my own daughter appealed to me," said Harrington. "In 1996, we had two kids on cross country and three kids the next year. I had 12 sixth graders on the middle school in 1995 so I knew they could be good when they got to high school."

With the success that he has had at Stuart and with younger daughter Jenae still a sophomore, Harrington didn't rush into the Princeton position.

"I saw the ad for the Princeton job in the paper and I decided to apply," said Harrington, who has known Princeton head coach Peter Farrell for years through track circles.

"Peter knows what I can do. It was a tremendously tough decision. I asked them to give me a week to think about it. The key was Jenae. If she had said 'Daddy, stay' I would have but she said you gave me last year and a state title. She told me to go for it."

While Harrington knows he faces an adjustment as he deals with college athletes, he isn't about to change his approach.

"I pour my heart totally into coaching," said Harrington. "I let the kids know that I care and that helps them to succeed. I ask for commitment and hard work for 2 hours a day. I know that they have a lot going on in the other 22 hours. I think Princeton will benefit from having me."

If the Princeton athletes can match the commitment Harrington displayed in building Stuart into a track power, they will certainly benefit in a big way.

REACHING NEW HEIGHTS: Princeton High senior star Ben Guervil, left, reaches out for extra yardage in action earlier this season. Last Saturday, Guervil produced a career day to help lead PHS to a 26-20 win at Steinert. Guervil caught six passes for 156 yards, including a 71-yard game-winning touchdown. He also added a key fourth quarter interception and his booming punting kept Steinert at bay through much of the afternoon. Senior Star Guervil Makes the Big Plays As Inspired PHS Football Edges Steinert

Steve Everette didn't have to deliver a fire and brimstone pregame speech to pump up his Princeton High football team before its game last Saturday at Steinert.

As the Little Tigers got off their bus, they saw the balloons and signs that told them that their hosts were celebrating homecoming.

While the Spartans may have viewed 0-2 PHS as the easy pickings that every team hopes to devour on homecoming, the Little Tigers weren't about to cooperate.

"We didn't know it was their homecoming until we got off the bus," said Everette. "We saw all the balloons and the guys got really worked up. That did it; I didn't need to worry about motivation."

The inspired Little Tigers drew first blood, taking a 7-0 lead in the second quarter on a four-yard touch pass from junior quarterback Johnny Mitko to senior tight end Frank Glacalone.

PHS built its lead to 13-0 early in the third quarter when Mitko hooked up again with Glacalone, this time on a 57-yard scoring strike.

Then Steinert, not wanting to be a generous host, stormed back with 20 unanswered points to take a 20-13 lead.

With PHS looking at a third straight defeat, senior star receiver/defensive back Ben Guervil took matters into his own hands. The 6'2, 180-pound Guervil kept a PHS drive alive with a crucial fourth down grab.

After the Little Tigers pulled even at 20-20, Guervil produced the decisive play of the contest as he broke free on a 71-yard touchdown reception with just over four minutes left to give PHS a 26-20 lead.

In the waning moments of the game, Guervil picked off a Steinert pass and boomed a 46-yard punt to help snuff out the Spartans' comeback bid as PHS hung on for its first win of the season.

Everette tipped his hat to the all-around contribution of Guervil. "It was his most consistent game," said Everette of Guervil, who ended the afternoon with six catches for 156 yards. "He had no dropped balls; he made some big catches. He realized that we needed him to make big plays and he came through."

Another PHS player coming through in a big way was the 5'7 quarterback Mitko who did his best imitation of Doug Flutie with his gutsy effort Saturday.

"He's played pretty well all year but everything came together for him against Steinert," said Everette, reflecting on a day on which Mitko hit on 14-for-28 passes for 276 yards and three touchdowns. "He's good at spreading the ball around; that makes us hard to defend."

The PHS defense also stepped up when it counted. "I think we've played pretty well defensively this year," said Everette, whose club outgained Steinert 362 yards to 290.

"Ewing didn't get much on us and Lawrence has the best quarterback around. Against Steinert, we didn't give up the big plays; that made the difference."

The fourth-year head coach is hoping that his club's win Saturday will help it develop a killer instinct. "I'm not sure if it's character or immaturity," said Everette with a laugh, reflecting on his team's topsy-turvy play this fall.

"We got a lead of 13-0 and the other team comes roaring back. It's the second time in three games that we've blown a lead. I'm glad we were able to come back and get the win this time."

Everette is hoping his team doesn't need to resort to drama to pull out a win this Friday night when it plays at Allentown.

"It's always a battle," said Everette. "Last year was the first time we had beaten them in three years. Two years ago, we lost on a field goal in the last minute. They are always scrappy and well coached."

If the Little Tigers can prevail in that battle, they will put themselves in the scrap for postseason play.

"We have a good chance to get into the playoffs and show Central Jersey how good we are," added Everette. "But you know how youth is, what you think is going to happen doesn't always happen."

PHS Girls' Soccer Struggling; Aims to Be More Dangerous

After the Princeton High girls' soccer team dropped four of its first five games, PHS head coach Greg Hand knew that his young club needed support.

"For me as a coach, I let them know that I trust them," said Hand quietly after his club fell 4-0 at WW/P-N last Thursday.

"I know that they want it as much as I do. I expect them to keep on working hard. They want to improve. They need to know that the soccer community appreciates what they are doing and that the coaches appreciate how hard they work."

In the wake of the rough start which has seen the Little Tigers score just three goals in their five games, Hand acknowledges that his team has plenty of room for improvement.

"Every game is a learning experience," said Hand whose roster includes five freshmen and seven sophomores.

"We're young, we're learning as individuals. We have a number of things to work on. There is no particular thing that will get it done. As coaches and as a team, we're trying to prioritize and keep our eyes open."

In Hand's view, getting his players to speak up on the field is one of the key priorities at this point. "One of the key risks the players have to take is to communicate," said Hand. "They have to demand the ball when the time is right for that. They have to be sure to give information when they make a pass."

In the second half, WW/P-N made some noise as sophomores Olivia Johnston and Hannah Deming made several good runs at goal.

"We had a couple of ideas going into the second half," recalled Hand, whose club showed progress as it beat Hightstown 3-1 last Saturday with Deming, Carter Haughton, and Paige Holman each scoring goals. "We executed a little better than we did in the second half. We were still inconsistent."

That inconsistency showed on defense as PHS couldn't dispossess WW/P-N, leaving goalie Sue Westock under fire for much of the contest.

"We need to take on defensive responsibilities better and sort out defensive situations as they arise," explained Hand, whose team plays at Hopewell Valley on September 29. "We continue to work on that. We haven't been doing the things well enough to outscore the opponents."

The focus right now for PHS is on playing better soccer, not wins and losses. "I think the key to the season is that the kids have to feel that they are going to do something good in the game," said Hand.

"They need to make sure that everyday something is happening which helps this team to be more competitive. We need to see growth in the way we play. We need to be a more dangerous attacking team and be better defensively. The results will come on how we play."

Stuart Field Hockey Edges Lawrenceville in OT As Gaudioso Radvany Makes Sudden Impact

ON A ROLL: Stuart Country Day junior field hockey star Kelly Bruvik streaks up the field in preseason play. In regular season play this fall, Bruvik has scored 17 points on eight goals and nine assists to help lead the Tartans to a sizzling 6-0 start. (Photo by Bill Alden/NJ SportAction)

As the Stuart Country Day field hockey team's annual battle with powerful Lawrenceville headed into overtime last Wednesday, there was a frenzied feeling in the air.

By the time the teams had reached the end of regulation, the early season clash had already turned into an instant classic. Lawrenceville, last year's state Prep A champion, grabbed the lead on an early goal by Becky Mantell. The Tartans, who won the 2004 Prep B crown, answered back with scores by freshman star Jaclyn Gaudioso Radvany and Katie Baker to take a 2-1 edge into halftime.

After intermission, the Big Red seized the momentum as Mantell scored again with 16:37 remaining to knot the game at 2-2. Then with just eight minutes to go in regulation, Lawrenceville found the back of the cage but the score was waved off due to a violation.

Getting a reprieve, Stuart found a bit of a rhythm and forced overtime. After huddling with their coaches in the brief break after regulation, both teams yelped in unison before heading onto the field.

In overtime, the youngest player on the field, Gaudioso Radvany, proved to be the coolest under fire as she calmly slotted in a feed from Kelly Bruvik to win the game and set off a jubilant celebration which saw her teammates race across the field for a loud group hug.

The precocious Gaudioso Radvany was as cool as a cucumber as she recounted her winning tally. "Kelly made a great pass and I just put it in," said Gaudioso Radvany. "She's a great player; every person out there deserved to win."

Gaudioso Radvany, who has been following the Tartan-Big Red rivalry since starting middle school at Stuart, was happy to be on the field for the sweet victory.

"I love the competition, winning is the best thing," asserted Gaudioso Radvany, a field hockey Junior Olympian. "I know about this rivalry from middle school. I'm proud to be out there. It's a three-year thing. I think we beat them in 1999 and 2002 and then today."

The Stuart players hit the field with extra emotion Wednesday as their tight-knit school community was still reeling from the tragic death of sophomore Rebecca Annitto in a car accident on September 14.

"We had the loss of Rebecca on our minds," acknowledged Gaudioso Radvany softly. "We did it for Rebecca. She was always there; she was really special. We were all there for each other."

Stuart head coach Missy Bruvik saw the game as part of the healing process. "I think they bonded," said Bruvik. "They do a lot of talking and I think they needed to have this game to come together. It's been hard."

Bruvik acknowledged that Gaudioso Radvany showed a special composure, considering all of the circumstances.

"She is completely poised with absolutely no fear," asserted Bruvik, whose team improved to 5-0 after a 3-0 win over Princeton High last Friday. "She is an attack player. She has a way of putting the ball on someone else's stick if she doesn't find the cage. She just came through the pressure beautifully. I think they all did that."

The Tartans' ability to handle the pressure of overtime didn't come from executing any specific blueprint.

"We had only practiced overtime once; I don't think we had any strategy," said Bruvik with a laugh.

"I thought we had good speed on the line. At that point, it was a matter of who was going to get the breakaways and who was going to finish. Christa [Goeke] made some incredible plays in goal and then got the ball up to the attack. It came down to adrenaline, desire, and taking advantage of opportunities."

In the glow of the win, Bruvik did acknowledge that she does need to fine-tune things, particularly on the defensive end.

"I think we're still working on things," said Bruvik, whose club edged Notre Dame 3-2 last Monday to improve to 6-0 on the season. "We need to work on getting the ball out of the backfield and using options upfield. There were times when we double-teamed the ball when we should not have."

All in all, pulling out a dramatic win over archrival Lawrenceville has to be viewed as a harbinger of good things to come.

"It's early in the season but you could feel it," said Bruvik, whose team will look to keep on the winning track when it hosts WW/P-S on September 30 before playing at Hopewell Valley on October 1. "The adrenaline and the excitement of being at home. To come back after being down 1-0, I don't know if we've ever done that against them."

Gaudioso Radvany, for her part, is looking for Stuart to do some exciting things this fall. "We were really just really positive today," asserted Gaudioso Radvany. "We brought it together, we have a good team. I'm excited about going for a championship like the Mercer County Tournament."

Blending Enthusiasm and Talent, PDS Field Hockey Off to 6-1 Start

It may have only been the sixth game of the season for the Princeton Day School field hockey team, but its 1-0 win over visiting Ewing last Saturday marked a milestone.

"We've won as many games already this season as we did last year," said PDS head coach Jill Thomas, whose club improved to 5-1 with the victory, an encouraging start considering that it needed a late surge in 2004 to finish 5-11-1.

More importantly than matching the program's win total of a year ago, the Panthers showed resilience as their hard-fought win over Ewing came after PDS suffered a 5-2 loss to Hightstown four days earlier.

"It was a good bounce back," said Thomas, whose club outshot Ewing 33-6 and won on a late goal by Emily Cook. "Their goalie played well; they had a plan. Any time you get into a game like that, you're happy to get the win. Emily made a great finish. We're at the point where everyone is contributing."

PDS has been getting a superb contribution from junior goalie Melanie Phillipou, a transfer from Hopewell Valley High. "Melanie has stepped in great," asserted Thomas. "She had a great day on Saturday. She made four saves on six shots. That's her third shutout. She has really fit in well."

In Thomas' view, the team's strong start comes down to a special blend of attitude and ability. "They are just so excited, that's what it's all about," asserted Thomas, whose club surpassed its 2004 win total with a 5-0 win over Nottingham last Monday. "I think it's the enthusiasm and we've got some real talent."

With much of PDS' talent congregated in its junior class, Thomas thinks that her club may just be scratching the surface of how good it can become.

"Each year you build and rebuild but with the juniors we have, we have a couple of years to look forward to," added Thomas, whose contingent of stellar juniors includes Phillipou, midfielder Katy Briody, and the Crouse twins, Allie and Nina, on attack. "They work hard everyday and they are going beyond the basics."

Thomas is hoping that the Panthers' loss to Hightstown, which snapped a four-game PDS winning streak, will be a blessing in disguise.

"Sometimes it's good to lose one particularly if you are a young team," said Thomas. "It was a matter of touches. We were only behind 3-2 with seven minutes left. Kudos to them, they are a good team."

PDS isn't expecting to lose too many more this fall. "I've told them that everybody will play their best against us, it doesn't matter who it is," said Thomas, whose team has home games against Morrisville on September 28 and Blair on October 1.

"We have to be ready for every game. We just need to continue what we've been doing. We've had our blip."

If the Panthers do keep it up, they could accomplish a number of milestones this season.

COOKING UP A WINNER: Princeton Day School sophomore Emily Cook moves up the field last Saturday on her way to scoring the only goal in PDS' 1-0 win over Ewing. Last Monday, Cook added another goal while Nina Crouse contributed a goal and three assists as the Panthers blanked Nottingham 5-0. PDS Girls' Soccer Needs Fine-Tuning In Order to Reach Its Full Potential

Showing a flair with the ball, the Princeton Day School girls' soccer team used its skill to produce a 4-0 start this season.

But in a 2-0 loss at the Hun School last week, the Panthers got a valuable lesson regarding the mental side of the game.

"Hun is a skilled team and they seemed to have a little more oomph than we did," said PDS head coach Ted Harrington in reflecting on the defeat. "I think they played harder for longer stretches. When you play against a good team like that you have to play hard the whole time."

While disappointed with the loss to the Raiders, Harrington has been pleased with the brand of soccer his team has displayed this fall.

"We've been moving the ball well," said Harrington, who is in his fifth year guiding the Panther program. "We've shown an ability to find players in open space. We've been patient on defense and we've tackled well."

One PDS player who played hard against Hun even as things went poorly was senior defender Mary Peters.

"I thought Mary Peters really stepped up as a vocal leader today, particularly after we fell behind," asserted Harrington. "She was directing things from the back."

The Panthers have been getting good work from several of their other veterans. "I think that Keely Langdon and Ashley Chappo have been leaders at times for us," added Harrington. "Alexis Maher has been solid in the midfield. She is relaxed and makes good decisions. Ellen Cook has a really good touch, she sees things on the field. Jess Cellars is a good tackler and a reliable defender."

The PDS veterans showed their stuff last Monday as the Panthers topped Hightstown 1-0 with Chappo notching the game's lone goal.

With the Panthers at 6-2, Harrington believes his team needs to fine-tune things just a bit to reach its full potential.

"We've got to play a little more compact on defense," said Harrington, whose club plays at powerful Pennington on September 29 before hosting Hopewell Valley on October 1. "We need to generate better scoring chances. We need to get better looks at the goal."

MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE

According to new research, eyedrops can work just as well as an eyepatch in correcting moderate amblyopia (commonly known as "lazy eye") in children. In amblyopia, the brain relies more on one eye than the other. As a result, the part of the brain circuitry connected to the less-favored eye fails to develop properly. Standard treatment calls for covering the stronger eye with a patch, which forces the weaker eye to work harder and put itself on a par with the stronger eye. Getting children to wear patches, however, can be a trying experience. The good news is that atropine eye drops, used once daily, blur vision effectively enough in the weaker eye to offer an alternative to the patch.

Amblyopia is called lazy eye because one eye stops functioning properly. Amblyopia can make it harder to read, catch a ball, or work on a computer.

A typical symptom of amblyopia is an unusual eye turn or a wandering eye. As noted in this week's column, research indicates that eyedrops can help correct moderate amblyopia.

Call MONTGOMERY EYE CARE at 609-279-0005 to schedule an eye exam for your child. We are located at Montgomery Center at 1325 Route 206. Office hours are Mon 10-8; Tues, Wed, Thurs 10-7; Fri 10-6, and Sat 9-3.

P.S. Many regard amblyopia as the most common cause of visual impairment in children.

Patriarca's Switch to Midfield Spot Helps Jump Start Hun Girls' Soccer

For the last two seasons, Val Patriarca has starred up front at forward for the Hun School girls' soccer team.

Looking to better deploy the junior's energy and work rate, Hun head coach Michael Poller recently moved Patriarca into the midfield.

Last week against rival Princeton Day School, Patriarca made her coach look like a genius as she scored a goal early in the second half to break a scoreless tie and then assisted on an insurance goal by Emily Gratch as Hun earned a hard-fought 2-0 victory.

Afterward, Patriarca acknowledged that a suggestion she made to Poller at halftime helped lead to her second half outburst.

"We were talking about me staying more central instead of going wide," recalled Patriarca. "It seemed like I was always open in the middle in the second half."

With Hun having lost two heartbreakers to PDS during Patriarca's career, she was determined to make the most of her opportunity when she broke free right before her goal.

"I just took my time," said a smiling Patriarca. "The keeper was in position but there is always that far post so I smashed it in there. It definitely gave us a big jolt of energy."

Patriarca believes that she can provide more than just energy from the midfield. "I worked with Lindsey Scott before when we were both playing forward," explained Patriarca. "Being in the midfield I can help the back and still work with Lindsey."

Poller, for his part, made the shift due to Patriarca's work rate all over the field. "Val is a workhorse so she likes to go back into the middle anyway," said Poller. "For me it just made sense to let her do what she likes to do naturally. It helps us by giving us a playmaker in the middle."

The shift of Patriarca has made her connection with Scott even more potent. "Having Val in the middle gives Lindsey a lot of space to play up top," added Poller, whose team improved to 4-2 with a 2-1 win over visiting Montclair Kimberley last Monday as Patriarca and Jackie Malleo scored goals. "She is very fast and dynamic and gets into spaces and finds holes all over the place."

Hun's team fitness helped it find holes as both teams battled through steamy conditions. "It was a hot day and we played the majority of our players just about the whole game," said Poller. "I gave them five minutes off here or there. We work on conditioning all of the time; it's something we focus on."

A key factor in the win over PDS was the focus shown by Hun's new starting goalie this season, sophomore Mary DiPastina. "She made a couple of big saves when she needed to make them," said Poller referring to DiPastina. "She's a work in progress. She's got the hands, she's got the technique. She's getting experience and she needs to work on being tuned in throughout the whole game."

After blowing a late one-goal lead in losing 3-2 at PDS last fall, Poller was pleased to see his team close the deal. "I feel like they had this potential in them," asserted Poller, whose team plays at Hightstown on September 29, hosts Penn Charter on October 1, and then plays at Notre Dame on October 3.

"They really believe in themselves. We talked about it (last year's game) before the game and at halftime. We made sure it wouldn't happen again. We finished them off. We played tough defensively in the last 15 minutes after we went up by two. We weren't giving anything away."

In Patriarca's view, the win over PDS is something the team can build on going forward. "It was definitely a big game," said Patriarca. "We had been nervous about it for a while. I think we just outran them. They were getting tired and we just kept pushing them. It's a game that's going to put us up in the Prep A."

TACTICAL RESPONSE: Hun girls' soccer coach Michael Poller eyes play in action last fall. Poller's decision to switch junior star Val Patriarca to midfield from forward this season has given the Raiders a lift as they have gotten off to a 4-2 start. Patriarca has scored a goal in each of Hun's last four games to help the Raiders go 3-1 in that strech. In upcoming action, Hun plays at Hightstown on September 29, hosts Penn Charter on October 1, and then plays at Notre Dame on October 3. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

STURHAHN, DICKENSON & BERNARD

Pittsburgh Steelers running back Jerome Bettis began his 12th season in 2005 without ever having made the Super Bowl, but that's far from the record. Tied for third at 18 seasons with no Super Bowl appearances are kicker Pat Leahy of the Jets and Atlanta defensive lineman Jeff Van Note. Tied for second at 19 seasons are Cardinals quarterback Jim Hart and Cleveland linebacker Clay Matthews. The leader at 23 seasons: Kicker Gary Anderson, although he has only himself to blame. After not missing a field goal all season long for Minnesota in 1998, he sailed one wide against Atlanta in the NFC Championship game that would have sent the Vikings to SB XXXIII.

Speaking of Super Bowl streaks and the Ohio River Valley, its perhaps no coincidence that the birthplace of football would have a perfect record of appearances through the big game's first 39 years. Every season, the best Ohio high school players face off against the best Pennsylvania players in a game known as the Big 33. Incredibly, none of the first 39 Super Bowls has been played without at least one alum from the Big 3, and several times as many as eight alums played in a single Super Bowl.

Okay racing fans, who was the first driver to officially average more than 200 mph for a lap around a closed course, and how long ago did he do it? The answer is Buddy Baker, who broke the barrier at Talladega Speedway on March 24, 1970. But get this — 35 years later, in late March of 2005 at age 64, Baker was at it again, averaging 200 mph in a Rusty Wallace Busch Series car during a test at Daytona International Speedway.

HUN

Football: With superstar Myron Rolle getting knocked out of the game in the first quarter due to a thigh bruise, Hun fell 9-3 at Mercersburg Academy last Saturday. Hun's defense held the fort but the offense could only produce a 45-yard field goal by Ryan Demler in the second quarter. The Raiders, now 1-1, host Penn Charter on October 1.

Field Hockey: Unable to get its offense untracked, Hun fell 2-0 to WW/P-N last Monday. Goalie Sarah Dileo helped keep the game close as she recorded seven saves. The Raiders, who dropped to 4-1-1 with the loss, host Peddie School on September 28 and Penn Charter on October 1 before playing at Steinert on October 3.

Football: A powerful ground attack helped Lawrenceville beat Germantown Academy 28-20 last Saturday. Devon Ramsay rushed for 137 yards and two touchdowns while David Caldwell added 110 yards. The Big Red's final score of the day came on a 75-year scoring jaunt by Ben Pooler. Lawrenceville, now 1-1, hosts Mercersburg Academy on October 1.

PDS

Football: Despite another big game by senior running back Alex Kowalski, PDS tasted defeat for the first time this fall as it fell 20-3 to visiting Bound Brook last Saturday. Kowalski rushed for 122 yards on 22 carries but PDS was unable to get into the end zone. The Panthers, now 2-1, will look to get back on the winning track when they play at Manville on September 30.

Boys' Soccer: Goals by John Maher and Antoine Hoppenot were not enough as PDS fell 3-2 at Nottingham last Monday. Panther goalie Logan Laughlin recorded 19 saves to help keep the game tight. PHS, which dropped to 3-2-2 with the defeat, plays at Hun on September 29 before hosting Hopewell Valley on October 1.

CHERRY FINISH: Hun School freshman forward Jelani Cherryrooks, left, flies past a Peddie defender last Thursday on his way to scoring a goal in Hun's 6-0 win over the Falcons. Last Monday, Cherryrooks added another goal while Kristian Richardson scored twice as the Raiders cruised past Pennington 7-0. Making The Invisible, Visible
There's nothing like clean fresh air... or is it really clean. How would you know? You can't see it. We all assume the quality of the air we breath in our home or business is at least good, if not great. With the help of a little device called "Air Advice" we can analyze the quality of the air you and your family are breathing.
• Do you or your children suffer from allergies?
• Do you ever wake up in the morning all stuffed up and have no idea why?
There could be a number of invisible microscopic particles in your air that are to blame. Things like:
• Airborne Bacteria
• Dust Mites
• Pet Dander
• Pollen
• Smoke
• Volatile Organic Compounds
We can analyze the quality of your air and MAKE THE INVISIBLE, VISIBLE. Once the air is tested, we'll send you a detailed report and advise you on the best course of action. Call 609-799-3434 to schedule an appointment.

"OZONE INJURY IN THE LANDSCAPE"

The weather these past few weeks has been hot! Air quality has been "Code Orange" and a few days it was "Code Red". When air quality is bad, people are advised to restrict outdoor activities. People experience a range of symptoms including sore throat, itchy eyes, and fatigue. Plants are suffering too! Plant Diagnostic Labs are receiving specimens of plants showing ozone injury. This can be confused with mite feeding or disease. You can see the damage as you drive past woodlands.

The Tulip Poplars are showing older leaves yellowing, showing dark stipple and dropping. Now, Tulip Poplars will experience yellowing and early drop of older leaves during drought stress, but this year they are not having drought stress. The dark stipple distinguishes ozone from drought. The symptoms from air pollution (caused primarily by ozone) are expressed most strongly on plants that are genetically highly susceptible. We call these plants "Bio-indicator Plants", because they are the first to show conspicuous symptoms.

The symptoms consist of red or yellow or black stipple on the upper leaf surface. This stipple is most pronounced on surfaces exposed to full sun, so parts of the leaf shaded by an overlapping leaf will be free of the damage. The fine stipple does not go through the leaf, so the lower leaf surface looks untouched. As the damage gets worse, the leaf may yellow and drop. Some of the ozone bio-indicator plants common in our landscape are Blackberry, Black Cherry, Common Milkweed, Tulip Poplar and White Ash.

When you start to see the bio-indicators showing lots of symptoms, this tells you that other plants are also being damaged. I have seen Petunias, Dogwoods, Hydrangeas, White Pine and many other landscape plants damaged by ozone. If you see stipple damage, check for the above characteristics of the injury. Damage will be most severe on older foliage (this is true for many pests and diseases as well).

OBITUARIES

Joseph Smagorinsky

Dr. Joseph Smagorinsky, 81, of Hillsborough, formerly of Princeton, died September 21 at Stonebridge Skilled Nursing Facility in Skillman after a long struggle with Parkinson's Disease.

A 1942 graduate of Stuyvesant High School in Manhattan, he received his bachelor's, master's, and Ph.D. degrees in meteorology from New York University, conducting his thesis research at the Institute for Advanced Study in the early 1950s. During World War II, in which he served as a lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, he completed a portion of his undergraduate studies at Brown University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

After serving in a variety of positions with the U.S. Weather Bureau from 1953 to 1955, he founded the General Circulation Research Section in Washington, D.C., which was renamed the Geophysical Fluid Dynamics Laboratory (GFDL) in 1963. In 1968, GFDL moved to its current home at Princeton University, where Dr. Smagorinsky served on the faculty while continuing as the laboratory's director until his retirement in 1983.

His work at GFDL profoundly influenced the practice of numerical weather prediction at major operational centers around the world. Climate models developed at the lab have provided a scientific basis for answering critical questions about human capabilities to affect climate change. A 1992 bulletin of the American Meteorological Society stated that "Dr. Smagorinsky's almost relentless pursuit of excellence at GFDL set a standard for other laboratories and centers that have contributed immensely to the growth of meteorology as a science" throughout the world.

In recognition of his contributions to the prediction of weather and climate using numerical methods, Dr. Smagorinsky received numerous awards and honors, including the Doctoris Rerun Naturalium Gradum Honoris Causa from the University of Munich in 1982, the IMO Prize from the World Meteorological Organization in 1988, and Sigma Xi National Lecturer from 1983 to 1985. He also received many awards from the American Meteorological Society, which he served as president in the mid-1980s. Most recently, he and his colleague Norman Phillips were awarded the 2003 Benjamin Franklin Medal in Earth Science.

He is survived by his wife, Margaret; three daughters, Anne Smagorinsky, Teresa Thompson, and Julia Schroeder; two sons, Peter and Frederick; and eight grandchildren.

Burial will be private. A memorial service will be held on Saturday, October 22 from 3 to 5 p.m. at Guyot Hall, Princeton University.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the National Alliance for Autism Research, 99 Wall Street, Research Park, Princeton 08540.

Arrangements are under the direction of The Mather-Hodge Funeral Home.

Anthony J. Vannella Sr.

Anthony J. "Tony" Vannella Sr., 92, of Princeton, died September 24 at his daughter's residence.

Born in Vineland, he had lived in the Princeton area since 1957.

He was a graduate of Trenton State College.

He retired as Lieutenant Colonel after more than 25 years with the United States Air Force, having served in World War II. He later retired from R.C.A. Sarnoff Labs in 1970 after more than 20 years of service.

An avid barbershop singer, he joined S.P.B.Q.S.A. in 1947, was an original member of the Garden Statesmen Princeton Chapter of S.P.B.Q.S.A., and a member of the Golden Oldies barbershop quartet. He also sang in the choir of St. Charles Borromeo Church, Skillman, where he was a member.

WONDERFUL ON WESTCOTT

This classic contemporary sits beautifully on a hill surrounded by trees in Princeton's western section — within easy walking distance to town. The design reflects a modern sense of spaciousness, every room in visual contact with exterior gardens. The long central living and dining spaces, with fireplace, offer broad views over the front and rear gardens onto a lovely deck. The south wing has two bedrooms, a den, a full and half bath. The north wing is a two-level structure consisting of a master bedroom with balcony, a fourth bedroom, a full bath and a large family room with a window wall overlooking a patio and rock garden. The family room has a corner fireplace, half bath, kitchenette and separate entry. This room is ideal for a studio or home office. The lot is large and private with mature trees, including hollies and Japanese dogwoods. Owned by architects, the house is available with exciting sketches for expansion. $889,000

Every aspect of this phenomenal property screams out that it is the real estate "find" of the year. Beyond the basic facts -- five bedroom colonial style house with 3 ½ bathrooms set on over 5 acres in a pleasant and extremely convenient Lawrence Township location with a Princeton address -- this house has so many wonderful features. Immediately apparent are the generous proportions, a sense of spaciousness seldom found in other houses in the area in this price range. It is beautifully trimmed and decorated, there are handsome wood floors and beautiful light fixtures. Flanking a welcoming entrance hall are the formal living room and stunning dining room. Windows at the back of the house provide great views of the gently rolling park-like grounds. A comfortable family room with fireplace is adjacent to the kitchen and casual dining area, well designed and featuring the most up-to-date conveniences. A back hall unites the garage entrance, a large laundry room, a first floor bedroom and full bath with the kitchen suite and access to the finished basement which has a media room, a playroom, space for a home gym, and a start-of-the-art wine cellar. On the second floor the large, corner master bedroom has natural light and includes a luxurious bath and ample closet space. Three additional pleasant bedrooms share a dynamic hall bath which features a high skylit ceiling, creating a most refreshing environment.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

HOMES GIVE GREATEST FINANCIAL SECURITY

People need to feel financially secure in order to retire. For most, that means owning at least one house or property, to build up investment equity and to have a place to call home.

Most Americans who are considering what "retirement" means say they want to stay involved in some form of work, not simply to generate income, but to enjoy continued challenge and mental stimulation. A lot of people are thinking of starting a new business at home, a second career that allows them to pursue interests they didn't have time to develop during the first half of their lives.

A large percentage of the 75 million Americans who were born between 1946 and 1964 say they want to spend their leisure and vacation time in comfortable surroundings that offer many opportunities for recreation and entertainment. For many, this vision of retirement includes more than one residence. At the present time, industry studies indicate that nearly two-thirds of all baby boomers already own two or more homes.

For all these reasons, real property is becoming the focus for retirement security.

For dependable individual advice on buying or selling real estate, call Tod Peyton, Realtor or any Peyton Associate at 921-1550. Please feel free to stop by my office at 343 Nassau Street in Princeton.

THERE'S A FORD IN YOUR PRESENT: Back in 1949 it was "In your future," according to one of Ford's most memorable slogans.
